

Foreign Aid Program Faces Big Slashes in Congress This Week

WASHINGTON — Congressional supporters of foreign aid programs acknowledged Sunday that President Johnson's request for $2.9 billion in the new fiscal year will be cut by at least a third and may even be rejected completely.

There are many reasons for this forecast. But the big one is the necessity of realizing savings of $10 billion in new appropriations and of $6 billion in actual spending.

Both limitations are mandatory under the pending 10 per cent income surtax which is scheduled to reach the House on Thursday.

The House has thus far trimmed just over $5 billion from appropriations requested by the administration last January and the huge defense appropriation has not been reached. But the actual spending cuts realized from these reduced appropriations total only a little more than $1 billion.

The reason for this disparity in most instances is the "lead time" between the appropriation of funds and its disbursement. Foreign aid is one of the programs where actual spending lags behind appropriations by as much as two years.

Thus a $1 billion cut in the foreign aid authorization and appropriation would be reflected only fractionally in actual spending on foreign assistance programs in the fiscal year beginning July 1. Still there is tremendous pressure to cut the program funds deeper than ever.

The effect of the "hold-down" psychology was demonstrated Thursday when Democrats and Republican members of the House foreign affairs committee met separately to agree on a foreign aid authorization which the full panel could recommend to the house.

Rep. Thomas E. Morgan, D-Pa., the committee chairman, had scheduled a vote on the recommendation for Tuesday. Before that he hoped that differences between the Democrats and Republicans on the committee could be adjusted.

The Democratic members appeared solidly behind Morgan's proposal to cut the President's figure by 20 per cent or about $600 million. About $570 million would have been cut, under the plan, from the $2.5 billion asked for economic loans and grants and about $30 million from the $400 million requested for grant military aid.

A majority of the Republican members were virtually agreed on a cut of about $800 million from the President's figure but were ready to reach an accommodation with the Democratic members. Before taking a position, however, the Republican caucus sought the views of Rep. Gerald R. Ford, R-Mich., the House minority leader.

The word came back that in the opinion of Ford, a cut of $800 million was not enough. He left Washington the same day for Michigan but several Republican members said they understood he wanted a reduction of $1.2 billion.

The upshot was that the Republican caucus reached no agreement. And when that was reported to the Democratic members they decided there was no point in taking a position.

Instead, Rep. Cornelius E. Gallagher, D-Va., tried to revive his scheme of having the aid program authorized by a continuing resolution of the House and Senate. This would throw the main fight over aid funds into the appropriations round, a separate legislative process.

The continuing resolution method would reduce the risk of having the authorizing legislation killed on the floor of the House. But to be effective it would have to be considered under a "closed" rule barring restrictive policy amendments.

There is always resentment over closed or "gag" rules governing consideration of legislation on the floor and it was on this account that the Democratic leaders frowned on the proposal when it was first mentioned by Morgan about a month ago.

Chairman Morgan has enough votes to win his committee's approval of his 20 per cent cut and report it to the House in an authorization bill. But to prevent its emasculation on the floor he must have the support of most of the Republican committee members and that means cutting the bill by about $700 million instead of his 20 per cent figure.

Rocky Asks Gov. Shafer To Play Active Campaign Role

HARRISBURG (AP) — New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller asked Gov. Shafer Sunday to play a large and active role in his nationwide campaign for the presidency, sources close to Shafer reported.

Rockefeller spoke with Shafer by telephone after the Pennsylvania chief executive had endorsed him on national television for the Republican presidential nomination.

"I want you with me, right down to the end now, Ray," Rockefeller was said to have told Shafer.

The high sources said that in addition to having Shafer travel around the country on his behalf, Rockefeller wants him intimately involved in the campaign planning and coordination in Pennsylvania.

Initially, Shafer is to accompany Rockefeller in Philadelphia Monday night for a meeting with Central and Eastern Pennsylvania members of the 64-member delegation to the GOP National Convention.

While Shafer had no firm estimate, it was believed that 45 to 50 of the delegates would back Rockefeller. Pennsylvania will have the third largest delegation at the convention.

Shafer advised former vice president Richard M. Nixon of his decision Friday night. He also had a telephone conversation that same evening with former president Dwight D. Eisenhower at Walter Reed Army Hospital.

Shafer is reported to have told Nixon that he would not participate in a divisive campaign in supporting Rockefeller's presidential aspirations.

The Pennsylvania governor and his staff also advised most of the Pennsylvania delegates of his decision by telephone Friday and Saturday from Tulsa, Okla., where he was attending a meeting of the Republican Governors Association.

Shafer, the sources said, told the delegates that he felt it was imperative for the Pennsylvania Republican Party to move to the forefront of the Rockefeller campaign at this time.

Shafer's belief that Nixon does not yet have the GOP nomination locked up was regarded as the most instrumental factor in his abandoning his favorite son role, the sources said.

If Rockefeller receives the nomination, Pennsylvania would be in an excellent position as a major state whose governor gave the New Yorker's campaign its first real momentum.

If Rockefeller failed in his bid, Shafer would be in a position to emerge in the forefront of the so-called Republican Establishment.

Should Nixon receive the nod, he could turn to a Rockefeller backer as his vice presidential running mate in a party-unifying move. Shafer would be one of the possibilities.

France Orders Sorbonne Closed; Police Evict Students

PARIS (AP) — The government ordered the Sorbonne closed Sunday and a massive force of police evicted student rebels who had occupied the school more than a month. The students left quietly but fights broke out in the surrounding Latin Quarter.

The Sorbonne school of the University of Paris was the second major building lost to students in three days and they seemed to recognize its importance as a symbol of their revolt. Defying a ban on demonstrations, hundreds of youths closed in on the school, shouting, "Liberate the Sorbonne!"

Riot police charged with tear gas and noise grenades. A group of demonstrators took refuge in the university's science school a half-mile away.

Students were still holding virtually nonstop meetings in the science school and school of medicine in Paris, and at many provincial universities occupied at the start of the social and political convulsion from which France is now recovering. With the Sorbonne in government hands, however, further moves to restore order among the students seemed likely.

In a gesture of conciliation, the Education Ministry announced it would begin talks Monday with teachers and students on the demands for university modernization that motivated the student revolt.

Police raised the French tricolor over the school and reported they collected several hundred clubs, pick handles and iron bars along with chains, gas masks, helmets, gasoline for Molotov cocktails, garbage-can cover shields and hundreds of

Eisenhower Suffers Another Heart Attack

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower suffered another heart attack Saturday night and his condition was described as stable Sunday by authorities at Walter Reed Army Hospital.

The 77-year-old five-star general was stricken anew while recuperating in the hospital from a mild heart seizure which hit him April 29 at his winter home in Palm Desert, Calif.

"The general spent a comfortable night and his present condition is stable," said the hospital announcement of Eisenhower's fourth heart attack since the first, a major one, incapacitated him for seven weeks in 1955 during his first term as president.

The hospital disclosed Sunday morning that Eisenhower "suffered another coronary heart attack last evening at approximately 9 p.m." (EDT).

Although officials refused to give any clinical details, there were indications that his physicians may not regard his condition as grave at this time.

One evidence of this was the word that no further announcement was planned until 10 a.m. Monday. In some of his past illnesses bulletins have been issued at much more frequent intervals.

Another hint was that the hospital spoke of the latest development as delaying Eisenhower's plan to leave the hospital June 24 to continue his recovery at the family's Gettysburg, Pa., home.

This seemed to imply that the doctors expect he will be able to make this move at some later date.

Still, any heart attack must be regarded as a serious matter, especially for a patient of Eisenhower's age and with his medical history.

Marines Kill 275 V.C.; Enemy Sinks Navy Boat

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. Marines, fighting on the northern coast and along a new supply road the North Vietnamese are pushing through the damp valleys near Khe Sanh, killed 275 enemy troops over the weekend in combat that may indicate a new cycle of murderous ground engagements, the U.S. Command reported Sunday.

The two Marine clashes in the north and a battle outside Saigon in which U.S. infantrymen turned back a battalion of 400 enemy troops, killing 52, were the sharpest encounters in nearly two weeks.

Rocket attacks on the capital were limited to four missiles Sunday.

The increased tempo of fighting in the north also extended to the sea. North Vietnamese shore batteries near the demilitarized zone fired on the U.S. cruiser Boston and sank a U.S. Navy Swift boat. Five members of the seven-man crew of the heavily armed, 50-foot aluminum craft were missing.

The biggest toll of enemy dead came when Marines about 12 miles south of Khe Sanh ran into heavy resistance on the road the North Vietnamese have pushed through by bulldozers from Laos into South Vietnam.

AP correspondent T. Jeff Williams, reporting from Khe Sanh, said the Marines claimed they killed 191 North Vietnamese and suffered 16 dead and 61 wounded in the fighting Saturday.

Brig. Gen. Carl C. Hoffman, commander of a task force protecting the red clay base camp, called a enemy battalion strength charge at dawn "impossible. They were fighting up a hill. I don't know why they tried that."

Large amounts of engineering equipment, including a Russian-made truck with a complete built-in workshop, were captured.

Mail from Pueblo Crewmen Has Dwindled Considerably

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. officials report the volume of mail from captured crewmen of the U.S. intelligence ship Pueblo has dwindled considerably over the past few weeks. But they decline to relate this development to prospects for release of the 82 men.

Rather, they suggest that North Korea may have decided its attempts to mount propaganda and diplomatic pressure through prisoner letters were not paying off.

The ship and its crews were seized last Jan. 25.

The U.S. effort at winning return of the captives is focused on diplomatic negotiations at Panmunjom. So far there have been 17 U.S.-North Korea sessions at the Korean War truce site, the latest one on May 25.

The Panmunjom talks still are in deadlock, and Washington officials will not predict when the prisoners may be freed, although they expect the meetings to continue.

Nearly 300 letters from the Pueblo crew are reported to have arrived in this country since the Communists captured the 906-ton U.S. Navy electronic survey vessel off the port of Wonsan.

The letters have been sent to family members and to public officials, including a March 4 open letter to President Johnson purportedly signed by all of the captured shipmates.

The gist of the letters generally has been in line with North Korean propaganda and demands at Panmunjom: to win return of the prisoners, the United States must apologize and confess that the Pueblo was spying inside Korean waters.

Phone Workers Postpone

Planned Strike

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Federation of Telephone Workers of Pennsylvania (FTWP) said Sunday it is forestalling a planned strike Monday against the Bell Telephone Co. "because of an order to coordinate appropriate action with other unions."

"At the request of public officials and in order to coordinate appropriate action with the other unions against the Bell system, we have decided to withhold an immediate strike in Pennsylvania," said I. C. Glendenning, head of the FTWP.

The FTWP had said it would strike Bell Monday morning because the company was shipping strikebreakers into Illinois to help break a strike in that state. Glendenning charged that 15 strikebreakers had been sent from Pennsylvania to Illinois.

The FTWP executive board will be in Harrisburg Tuesday to discuss the matter with the Public Utility Commission, said Glendenning. He said the board would also press for passage of a pending strikebreakers' legislation recently proposed in the House.

"We want them to work out some agreement (with the PUC) and give them time to determine what action they want to take," Glendenning said in explaining why the 13,000 member union forestalled the strike.

W. W. Kinkel, assistant vice president of labor relations for Bell, has said that some 15 Bell management people went to Illinois to help the Illinois Bell Telephone Co., struck 58 days by a union not affiliated with the FTWP.

Social Security Cards Must Bear Married Name

Women about to get married should remember that when they change their name they also must change social security cards.

A representative of the Social Security office is in Warren at the Hickory St. Army Wednesday, except holidays from 9:30 a.m. to noon and 1 p.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Newlyweds or women who have been married and forgotten to change their social security account to the married name, upon application, will be issued a new card with the same number but the new name. Having the correct name on the card will prevent the chance of reduced benefits upon retirement due to confusion of records.

Search Resumed For Plane Crew

PUT-IN-BAY, Ohio (AP) — Coast guard boats resumed their search Sunday for a single-engine plane believed to have crashed off South Bass Island with two Monaca, Pa., men aboard.

Two boats from the marble-head coast guard station conducted dragging operations until late Saturday, before calling a temporary halt.

The men, Russell Simmons and Walter King, have been missing since Monday night. The Stinson model 108 aircraft took off from Beaver Falls, Pa., for Put-In-Bay.

Dragging operations are being carried out in a portion of Lake Erie west of South Bass Island to Green Island — a distance of about 1 1/2 miles.

A Coast Guard spokesman at the ninth district search and rescue headquarters in Cleveland said positive identification has not been made on wreckage — a strut and wheel — found by a ferry captain near Put-In-Bay Tuesday.

Clark to Introduce Bill For Cemetery Honoring RFK

WASHINGTON — Sen. Joseph S. Clark (D., Pa.) announced Sunday that he will soon introduce legislation to create a new National Cemetery in Chester County, Pa., in honor of the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy.

Clark identified the proposed site as a 531-acre tract located in East Nantmeal Township and West Nantmeal Township in Chester County, in the midst of one of the most densely populated areas on the East Coast. The site is now owned by the General State Authority of Pennsylvania and is available for purchase at the present time.

Native of Tennessee Is New Miss Pennsylvania

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — A striking blonde with a slight southern drawl, a legacy of her former home in Tennessee, was crowned Miss Pennsylvania of 1968 Saturday, winning out over 30 other beauties.

Susan Robinson, a native of Lookout Mountain, Tenn., and a graduate of Carnegie-Mellon University at Pittsburgh, shed no tears as she accepted the crown, which is her ticket into the Miss America pageant at Atlantic City this fall.

Competing as Miss Allegheny County, Susan, 21, won out over Miss Philadelphia, Jean Marie Downey, 21, also a Temple University junior, who was named first runnerup.

Miss Robinson took home, along with her state crown, a $1,000 scholarship and a special, four-year scholarship offered by Gov. Raymond P. Shafer, good at the University of Pittsburgh, the University of Pennsylvania or Temple University.

The new Miss Pennsylvania said she hoped to use the scholarships to continue her studies in languages, her major at Carnegie-Mellon.

Still flushed with excitement, Susan said: "I haven't really made up my mind on what I want to do."

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel F. Robinson, still live at Lookout Mountain, where her father is a pharmacist.

In the talent portion of the contest, Susan offered a comedy monologue, in hillbilly dialect, entitled, "Sis Hopkins and Her Beau Billious."

Miss Downey, who won a $300 scholarship, offered a medley from the hit show "South Pacific."

The other three runnerups, who all receive $250 scholarships, were: Miss Leigh Valley, Jane Ellen Terrigan, 20, Allentown; Miss York County, Kathy Valera Seitz, 18, Felton; and Miss Lancaster County, Gail Rabold, 18, of Ephrata.

LBJ Spends Father's Day With Family at Ranch

STONEWALL, Tex. (AP) — Like the average American father President Johnson enjoyed a day with his family on Father's Day, got special gifts from his two daughters and went to church twice.

The 59-year-old President was in a gregarious mood. He paused to talk with fellow churchgoers and invited reporters and photographers to come up to the LBJ ranch for coffee and to try some ripe, juicy Stonewall peaches between church services.

Johnson went first on the warm, sunny Sunday to 9 o'clock mass at St. Francis Xavier Catholic Church at Stonewall with his younger daughter, Luci, and members of his staff.

There the pastor, the Rev. Wunthald W. Schneider, preached a Father's Day sermon, telling the dads in the congregation that they shouldn't allow themselves to be too taken up with work outside the home so that they don't know what's going on in the family.

Outside, several adults introduced themselves to the President by name and then one little girl ran up to say, "I'm Lois Lujan—I'm nobody—but I just want to shake hands with you." The President smilingly obliged

Miss Susan Robinson, the new Miss Pennsylvania, is shown in her talent presentation during the contest in Hershey. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel F. South Vietnam Said Edging More Toward Conciliation

SAIGON (AP) — South Vietnam's government is slowly edging toward a more conciliatory posture in the war.

President Nguyen Van Thieu and Premier Tran Van Huong still are not ready to accept the idea of direct negotiations with the Viet Cong's National Liberation Front or join it in a coalition government.

But the rejection is no longer as absolute and as categorical as it was in the days when Vice President Nguyen Cao Ky dominated the political scene.

With enemy forces entrenched on all sides of South Vietnam's capital and less than 20 per cent of the country's territory under the government's undisputed control, it is difficult to imagine how the government can end the war without talking to the enemy.

More and more government officials at the highest level recognize this in private. Publicly, they maintain that the enemy is Hanoi, and the Viet Cong is simply Hanoi's local agent.

The reasoning is flawless, but in the absence of an allied military victory it remains largely meaningless. With the enemy at the door, an argument over the enemy's chain of command is largely academic.

The first South Vietnamese minister to express this view in public was Minister of State Phan Quang Dan. Dan told lecture audiences in the United States last week that unless the government can kill off all the Viet Cong, it will have to end up by talking to them.

Huong, with Thieu's approval, promptly dismissed Dan from the government on the grounds that his view differed from that of the president and the National Assembly. Huong carefully refrained from expressing his own view on the matter. There were indications that Dan's dismissal was due at least partly to private dissension and rivalry within the government.

Only a few weeks ago, Dan's remarks would have been regarded virtually as treason and a violation of Article Four of the constitution which outlaws

New York Primary To Determine Slates

ALBANY, N. Y. (AP) — In the first presidential primary since the assassination of Robert F. Kennedy, New York Democrats choose Tuesday between "uncommitted" slates endorsing the late senator's goals and slates favoring Hubert Humphrey and Eugene McCarthy, respectively.

Pro-Kennedy slates had been entered in 30 of the state's 41 congressional districts. In the last week, however, nearly all announced they would go to the party's national convention committed, as one member said, only "to principles for which Kennedy lived and died."

This means, the member added, getting into the Democratic platform Kennedy's views on such issues as the Vietnam war and urban problems while deferring a decision on who should be the party's standard-bearer.

John J. Burns, Democratic state chairman, reiterated this by stating that, in view of Kennedy's death, delegates formerly pledged to him "are now running as supporters of the principles of Senator Kennedy and should be so designated."

Of New York's 190 Democratic convention delegates, 123 will be chosen at the polls Tuesday. The State Committee will pick another 65 after the primary, and the two other spots go to the state's national committee and national committeewoman.

Republicans will elect 82 delegates to their convention. Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller is being challenged by supporters of Richard M. Nixon for only 11 seats.

Full or partial slates favoring

McCarthy are running in 37 districts. Pro-Humphrey delegates are on the ballot in 25 districts.

The muted tone of the presidential contest has not carried into the three-way race among Democrats seeking to oppose Republican Sen. Jacob K. Javits.

Eugene Nickerson, Nassau County executive and a political ally of Kennedy, and Paul O'Dwyer, a New York City lawyer who supports McCarthy, have based their campaigns on opposition to the Vietnam war.

U.S. Rep. Joseph Y. Resnick, who backs the administration's foreign policy, argued that the war should not be an issue while the Paris peace talks continued.

Javits, seeking a third term, has no Republican opponents. His endorsement by leaders of the state's Liberal party is challenged, however, by Murray Zaron, a labor lawyer.

West Berlin To Commemorate Uprising in '53

BERLIN (AP) — West Berliners prepared to commemorate the anniversary Monday of the anti-Soviet uprising in East Germany in 1953 and to demonstrate against new Communist restrictions on travel to this isolated city and West Germany.

Traffic to and from West Berlin was reported normal Sunday. Police said motorists waited the usual half-hour while East German officials checked documents and collected visa fees and increased freight charges on the autobahn between West Berlin and West German territory.

The United States, Britain and France have protested the East German action which also will require West Germans and West Berliners to have passports by July 15 to travel across East German territory.

Outbound traffic Saturday was slowed to a crawl when masses of Berliners were subjected to the newly enforced East German regulations.

Officials in Berlin and along the West German border were bracing for more massive tie-ups when traffic to and from the city builds up at the end of the holiday weekend.

A West Berlin police spokesman said the peak of that travel could come late Monday or early Tuesday when regular heavy truck traffic is resumed.

Monday is the 15th anniversary of the East German workers revolt that was put down by Russian tanks. It is a West German holiday.

The Social Democratic party will hold a commemorative rally near the Communist wall dividing the city Monday night. The featured speaker will be Herbert Wehner, West German minister for all German affairs.

Later the Christian Democratic Union will hold a demonstration against the travel restrictions in John F. Kennedy Square in front of City Hall. The featured speaker there will be Rainer Barzel, spokesman for Chancellor Kurt Georg Kiesinger's Christian Democrats in the West German Bundestag.

The four World War II victor powers are responsible for Berlin and its affairs pending a German peace treaty.

Clark, Schweiker Agree to Debates

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Joseph S. Clark, D. Pa., and the man who seeks his Senate seat, Rep. Richard S. Schweiker, R. Pa., have agreed to a series of four televised debates, aides said Saturday.

The two agreed to two half-hour debates prior to Aug. 1 and two more during the period between Labor Day and Nov. 5, with two debates to center on domestic issues and two on foreign issues.

All four debates, aides to the two men said, will be made available to radio and television stations throughout Pennsylvania.

Democrats For Humphrey To Distribute Literature

JAMESTOWN, N.Y. — Chautauque County Democrats supporting Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey for president will be distributing literature at Jamestown area factories today and Tuesday morning.

The campaign literature asks for support of the delegates to the Democratic National Convention in Tuesday's primary who lean toward Humphrey.

A spokesman for the Humphrey Democrats said volunteer workers will be making early morning appearances at the gates of Blackstone Corp., Marlin Rockwell plants in Falconer and Jamestown, and at Crescent Tool Corp. this morning. Tuesday morning will find the Humphrey supporters distributing literature at Art Metal plants in Buffalo and Jamestown, Dahlstroms and AVM Corp.

The delegates who are officially uncommitted to any candidate but who are known to lean toward the Vice President include Edward LeBoeuf, treasurer of Alfred University; John O'Connell, an Olean contractor; and Joseph Granto, a Dunkirk AFL-CIO representative. Alternate delegates leaning toward Humphrey include Joseph Trusso Jr., Jamestown; Benjamin Perreault, an attorney from Salamanca; and Raymond Smith, president of the First National Bank of Corning.

Humphrey supporters also are conducting door-to-door campaigns in Jamestown, Falconer, Dunkirk and Salamanca. In addition to seeking support for the Humphrey delegates the volunteer workers are also asking support for Congressman Joseph Y. Resnick, who seeks the Democratic nomination for U. S. senator.

Nixon Won't Try to Sidetrack Rocky's Drive

CHICAGO (AP) — Strategists for Richard M. Nixon's presidential bid said Sunday that the former vice president will aim his campaign toward the November election and will make no attempt to sidetrack Gov. Nelson Rockefeller's belated drive for the Republican nomination.

John Mitchell, national manager of Nixon's campaign, told newsmen that Nixon will not "engage in an exchange of charge and counter-charge with Rockefeller or in any of the other tactics of the old politics of divisiveness."

Mitchell and some 125 of Nixon's key campaign supporters met in closed sessions Saturday and Sunday.

The former vice president spoke by telephone to the group Sunday from New York. A spokesman said Nixon urged the campaign coordinators to develop the United Citizens for Nixon program which is aimed at luring independent and Democratic voters.

The spokesman said Nixon also asked his forces to work harder in the larger states but he stressed the need for cooperation with local GOP leaders "because we'll be working with them in the fall."

Mitchell said that the development of "strategy discussed here was formulated with Nixon at recent meetings in Key Biscayne, Fla."

Mitchell said it would not be reasonable "to ask Nixon supporters to bear the additional cost of matching the Rockefeller campaign."

He said that Nixon invited Rockefeller to enter the primaries but the New York governor "chose to wait until the primaries were past and then to take the Madison Avenue route."

"Our information is that some $5 million is budgeted for his post-primary advertising campaign," Mitchell said.

Rockefeller's efforts would improve his standing in the public opinion polls, Mitchell said, but added, "The polls don't elect presidents, the people do."

Mitchell said that Gov. Raymond Shafer's endorsement of Rockefeller Saturday in Tulsa, Okla., is "not a serious challenge to Nixon because Shafer apparently speaks only for himself."

Mitchell also said that the assassination of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy had no effect on Nixon's position in the presidential race.

House Considers Monday Cut-Back School Aid Bill

HARRISBURG (AP) — The House returns Monday to sift through the skeletal remains of its bill for state financial aid to nonpublic schools.

As passed by the House one month ago, the bill would have provided $27 million for Pennsylvania's private and parochial schools. But the Senate cut it down to $4.3 million by amendments last week and returned to the House for approval.

The Senate amendments also shifted the financial responsibility for the purchase of service program from the cigarette tax to horse racing.

Both the Shafer Administration and the Pennsylvania Catholic Conference, the foremost advocate of the legislation, have endorsed the amendments.

The Republican House majority leader, Lee A. Donaldson, said he hoped the bill would be called to a vote Monday and that the House would concur in the Senate amendments.

"I will vote to concur," he said, "but, of course, this issue crosses party lines."

Both House and Senate return at 3 p.m.

Rep. Martin P. Mullen, the Philadelphia Democrat who has been the most vocal advocate of state aid, called the Senate version of the bill inadequate.

But William B. Ball, counsel for the Catholic Conference, which represents the state's eight Roman Catholic dioceses, commented:

"Our position is that we continue to support the bill as passed by the Senate. Naturally, we hope the House will concur in the Senate amendments."

The legislation would authorize the state to reimburse non-public schools for the teaching of modern foreign languages, physical sciences, mathematics and physical education. The reimbursement would be determined by the nonpublic school cost in teachers' salaries, textbooks and other instructional materials.

The program would be funded initially, beginning July 1, from $4.3 million in harness racing revenue. Harness racing would continue to supplement the cost until the newly legalized sport of thoroughbred racing reached $10 million, when it would assume full financial responsibility for the program.

The legislation also would allocate 50 per cent of any excess above $10 million to the non-profit private and parochial schools.

Another important matter, the proposed Susquehanna River Basin Compact, will be brought up for another vote, after having been defeated in the House last Wednesday.

The compact bill was beaten down after attempts were made to delete the Appropriations Committee's amendments to restrict the powers of the proposed interstate compact commission.

Rep. Robert C. Wise, D-Lycoming, who led the unsuccessful fight to drop the revisions, called on Gov. Shafer to lend the full weight of his office to the battle. Shafer endorsed the compact in its original form.

Donaldson also said he hoped a $1.71 billion general appropriations bill covering 80 per cent of state spending in the new fiscal year could be brought to the House floor before the end of the week.

Another $265 million in individual money bills, including some $122 million for Penn State, Pitt and Temple universities, is on Senate floor for consideration.

The two Democratic minority floor leaders, meanwhile, warned they would introduce discharge resolutions to free legislation from Republican controlled committees if the bills were not brought to the floor.

House Minority Floor Leader Herbert Fineman said he would attempt to free his proposed "Pennsylvania Weapons Control Act" from the Law and Order Committee if it were not released before the end of the week.

And Senate Minority Leader Ernest P. Kline said he would try to discharge from the Labor and Industry Committee a bill to liberalize the state's unemployment compensation law.

A discharge resolution has not been approved in the General Assembly for at least three decades.

BOAC Planes Grounded By Strike

LONDON (AP) — More than half the 46 airliners operated by the British Overseas Airways Corp. were grounded at London's Heathrow Airport Sunday by a strike of pilots demanding higher pay.

Eighteen scheduled flights from Heathrow were canceled. Seats were found with other airlines for 2,000 passengers booked to fly on BOAC. The government-owned airline still plans two transatlantic flights daily from Manchester, one to New York and the other to Montreal and Toronto.

The pilots are demanding the introduction of formula pay, a complicated structure used by American airlines. They said they were "angry and frustrated" by the lack of response from BOAC in the talks that broke down early Sunday morning.

More than 1,000 pilots went on strike at midnight. The strike left 26 BOAC airliners grounded at Heathrow.

Sir Giles Guthrie, chairman of the airline, told a news conference the strike could cost $840,000 a day in lost revenue.

He said the pilots wanted BOAC to accept a plan that the company had not had time to study in depth and accused them of ignoring "the economic plight of Britain."

Pilots' pay scales range from $9,600 a year for copilots to $14,112 for senior captains. Sir Giles said the pilots were demanding raises amounting to $240 a week.

Pentagon Rejected Idea Of Drafting Prisoners

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense officials say the Pentagon in 1966 examined and rejected the possibility of drafting imprisoned men for military duty.

The idea—put to use in World War II—was rejected on two grounds:

—Judicial authorities, not the armed forces, should be responsible for rehabilitating criminals, and —Military service should not be used as a form of punishment for law offenders.

Weighting of the draft-prisoners idea came in an over-all study of existing moral standards for servicemen.

The question recently arose outside the Pentagon when the managing editor of a prison publication wrote the Associated Press suggesting convicts be used to fight in Vietnam.

John R. Michel, managing editor of the Montana Prison News at the Deer Lodge penitentiary, estimated there are over half a million males of service age in various U.S. prisons, reformatories and jails.

"Certainly not all of these would qualify as desirable soldiers, but the potential is there if Congress would act to provide for their induction into special units," Michel said.

"The idea is not new; General George Patton had a whole battalion of convicts at the Battle of the Bulge," he continued. "He rated them 'damn good soldiers' in the European Theater of Operations."

"Giving a man a chance to serve his country after he has dishonored himself and his community is a controversial idea, but it has its merits. An individual could win back his self-respect and also that of his country."

The 1966 study by a special Pentagon group recommended—and then Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara approved—several regulation changes governing the draft of certain law offenders.

But the idea of taking men out of prison and putting them into uniform apparently had little support.

World War II does provide the precedent for drafting convicts. During a three-year period beginning in 1942 the Army inducted about 2,000 men from prison.

"It must be pointed out that these men were not hardened criminals," the Pentagon says. "Certain individuals were ruled out, including those convicted of treason, murder, kidnapping, arson, illegal narcotics sales or sex offenses."

Unfortunately, the government conducted no postwar survey to see how the ex-convicts did in service or later in civilian life.

The 1966 study, an official said, did result in breaking away some rather "arbitrary features which had become entrenched" in existing regulations.

One change eliminated the need for waivers—and thus mountains of paperwork—to permit induction of minor offenders or prosecuted juveniles.

Furthermore an iron-clad prohibition against the drafting of a man with a felony conviction on his record was eased; each felony case is now examined to see if the man is suitable for service.

In the case of juveniles, an official said, "We also have an obligation to the draft not to let juveniles get off the hook for a year by running up a lot of minor violations."

Another important change in moral standards was made in the handling of men under suspended sentence or probation. Originally no such individual could be considered for duty.

"Under current policies, induction or enlistment is no longer prohibited if only the civil restraint consists either of unconditional suspended sentence or unsupervised, unconditional probation," the Pentagon says.

On the other hand, people in jail or on supervised probation can't be considered for service,

Vihlen Sighted 240 Miles South of Miami

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Hugo Vihlen, the airline pilot trying to cross 4,700 miles of Atlantic Ocean in a boat no longer than his own six-foot frame, was sighted 240 miles south of Miami Sunday and reported in good condition.

The coast guard at Miami said an unidentified vessel spotted Vihlen and reported he was in "good condition and in no need of assistance."

Vihlen showed off the coast of North African March 29 in his six-foot long "April Fool" saying he would make the voyage from Casablanca to Miami in 75 days.

The coast guard said the bath-tub-size boat was pushing along at one and a half knots.

Reagan Sides More with Nixon Than Rocky on National Problems

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — California Gov. Ronald Reagan said Sunday he tends "to view the solutions to national problems more in line with Richard Nixon perhaps than with Nelson Rockefeller."

Reagan, who heads the California delegation to the Republican National Convention as a "favorite son" nominee, was asked whether he could "make common ground" with either of the two announced candidates for the GOP presidential nomination.

"I've asked all our delegates to not give any opinion as to who they might favor," he said, adding that he felt he should do the same.

However, when asked whether he shared the "political philosophy" of either the former vice president or the New York governor, Reagan mentioned Vietnam and "involvement of government in domestic affairs" and said, in these areas, "I tend to view the solutions to national problems more in line with Richard Nixon perhaps than with Nelson Rockefeller."

He made the remarks on CBS' "Face the Nation" television program, taped in Tulsa Saturday for showing Sunday.

Later in the 30-minute program Reagan said, "Both Richard Nixon and I have spoken out against the limited war, against the 'no-win' policy" in Vietnam.

"My impression is that perhaps Nelson is placing a little more faith in negotiations..."

The California governor said his remarks should not be taken as an indication he favors Nixon, adding, "In governors' conferences, Gov. Rockefeller and I have been in agreement many times across the table."

Told that many observers during the two-day national Republican governors conference in Tulsa felt he had "acted like a candidate" himself, Reagan said, "It would be hard put to know where anyone got that idea."

Asked whether he would be interested in either the presidential or vice presidential nomination, he replied: "Well, I'm certainly not a contender for the nomination—the vice presidential nomination."

He then said he "technically" is a contender for the presidential nomination because he is the favorite son nominee of the California delegation.

Under repeated questioning about his presidential aspirations, Reagan said, "This job seeks, rather than someone seeking it." He said he had "done nothing" to encourage speculation that he is seeking the nomination.

Wallace Opposes Gun Control; Says Let Police Enforce Laws

BOSTON (AP) — Former Gov. George Wallace of Alabama, opposing the idea of federal gun control legislation, said Sunday the way to prevent killings is "to let the police enforce the laws" already written.

And, he told a news conference, it would help prevent homicide if "we would reverse some of the decisions of the federal courts which make it impossible to enforce the law."

The third-party presidential candidate flew to Boston to put in a plug for his petition drive to get on the presidential ballot in Massachusetts. His campaign is just getting underway in this state and Connecticut, Maine and Maryland.

Earlier in the day, Wallace appeared on ABC television's "Issues and Answers" in Washington.

He told newsmen at Logan international Airport in Boston that had already met the qualifications to get on the ballot in 25 states, and he expects to qualify in at least 10 other states within the next 30 days.

He was greeted at the airport by a crowd of between two and three hundred persons.

In Washington, Wallace said he feels that "poor people are being used" by the protest movement now underway there, and added that he would not, if invited, join a demonstration scheduled for Wednesday.

"No sir," said Wallace, "I will not march with them."

The former Alabama governor said he is sympathetic with those who are poverty stricken but he advocated again a solution through education and a tax incentive program for private industry to provide more jobs,

My Aching Back!

If there is any one complaint voiced by the average citizen more often than to complain of a running nose, this is it. Maybe it isn't an outright ache. It can be a recurring twinge, a dull throb, or the feeling that someone just plunged a knife into the sacral-lumbar portion of the body.

But whatever it is, it's painful, and the sufferer doesn't have to make many trips to the doctor before he learns that the medical profession just doesn't have too much knowledge as to its causes, or have any sure-fire treatment that will provide quick and dependable relief.

Mostly because so little research has been done in this field the problems of the lower back have for years constituted one of our most pressing medical problems. So much so, that last November,

Senator Joseph Clark offered an amendment to the Public Health Service Act that would establish a National Back Institute as a division of the National Institutes of Health at Bethesda, Maryland.

In introducing the measure, Clark said, "In spite of the lighthearted banter about aching backs, the fact of the matter is that ailments of the back constitute a major medical problem in the United States today, and one for which medical science has shockingly few answers."

This action on the part of the Senator is commendable, for in this age of really big problems--poverty, war, ghetto blight, and lawlessness--it is good to know that at least one of our lawmakers can find time to consider the miseries of the common man.

MASON DENISON

'Think Pennsylvania'

HARRISBURG—A gaudy oversized campaign button is popping out on suitlappels in Harrisburg.

This one is different from the bitty ones you see for political candidates. It's about three inches around, in an eye-popping yellow with black letters.

"THINK PENNSYLVANIA" it reads. "Buy Pennsylvania - a m a d e products."

Denison

A gent by name of Dean Moore is the local showman who has been running around pinning badges on the Governor, his cabinet members, legislators, the Mayor and even the man selling Lancaster hot dogs in the street. All the buttons, billboards, posters and advertising across the state are to hail his biggest project in a colorful career of producing expositions and fairs.

He calls it "PENN EXPO", short for Pennsylvania Industry Exposition. Billed as a showcase of all this state does industrially, the event will run June 24-29 in the rambling Farm Show Building here in Harrisburg.

"We make more shoes here than any other state, we grow more mushrooms, make more cigars," he crows. "The Expo has 300 displays, and every industry's represented."

This chap Moore even talked one of his exhibitors into commissioning a statue by Prof. Donald B. Wright, a sculptor from Penn State's Altoona campus. He's going to weld pieces of steel together during the show, and anyone who wants to bring an offering is welcome.

Fast talker like the circus promoter he once was, the expo director is an individualist who sports expensive suits, a long black Cadillac with a phone in it, and a Texas-import secretary who pours out Southern charm to promote her adopted Pennsylvania.

His staff is stepping to a merry tune these last two weeks. They have Governor Shafer hosting a reception for 2000 on opening night; a luncheon for ambassadors; and entertainment all week by Allen & Rossi (Marty Allen was Pittsburgh's jitterbug champ 'way back), Jimmy Dorsey Band (boys from Shenandoah), Nina Simone (she studied at Curtis Institute in Philadelphia) and many others.

Everybody seems to cooperate with producer Moore, probably because he's running the expo on a straight profit-loss basis -- with his own money. He is under the thumb of no politician, private company, or pressure group.

Pennsylvania's U. S. Senator Hugh Scott mailed invitations to 40,000 businessmen. State Secretary of Commerce Clifford Jones cut a statewide radio tape announcement pushing the expo.

Labor and Industry Secretary John Tabor flew around the state to publicize it. Chambers of Commerce Executives endorsed it. Government agencies and purchasing groups are sending buyers.

Pennsylvania and Florida are the only states running promotions like this. The latter is in its seventh year but Mr. Moore boasts more exhibits in this show in its first year!

Maine once had a products expo, but it faded out, and the Florida and Pennsylvania directors suspect it may be because the job was left to state government instead of professional promoters.

Mr. Moore says the highest hurdle he had in putting his show over was the ghost of Pennsylvania's only other attempt at this game. Long before he came here from the Midwest, an "industrial and construction exhibition" lasted one year, 1954, in the Farm Show Building.

"It was just a home show -- they had tremendous crowds," Mr. Moore explains. "But the exhibitors couldn't sort the buyers from the lookers. That's why we have two days just for businessmen."

"They had no procurement conference for government buyers, no ambassadors lunch, and only about half as many exhibitors. When the state administration that was running it changed, there was nobody left who cared, and it flopped," he rushes on.

Even so, some remain to be convinced. As they are, Penn Expo promises to get bigger and bigger each succeeding year -- and it's one venture where taxpayers' money for once isn't being thrown down the drain via conventional bureaucratic fumbling.

When he became a reporter on the New York Daily Mirror he made it a habit to read a page of Hemingway--any page--before going out on an assignment, to soak up style and technique. The gimmick worked and stuck; Bishop at his best performs stonemasonry with language, the pieces so neatly fitted that verbal mortar is unnecessary.

"His output is steady and large. Since 1945 he has published 13 books, both fiction and non-fiction. He has worked as a newspaper feature writer and as assistant to the late columnist Mark Hellinger, as an editor of Colliers and Liberty Magazines and for various Catholic literary enterprises, and has written countless articles for national magazines. The thrice-weekly column is as ceaseless as saw."

His newest book, a Bishop-style, tell-it-like-it-is, minute-by-minute account of what happened in Dallas the day Kennedy was killed, has been a making since two days after the assassination. Its 250,000 words are a distillation of 6,500,000 words of reading and several hundred interviews.

His view of reporting as a profession has not changed in four decades, he says. His professional ethics are as bone-simple as his prose: tell exactly what happened, and nothing more--nothing less, either. Writing a column is slightly different, of course: "A columnist is just a reporter with an opinion."

Young reporters just out of journalism school are too suspicious, says Bishop, "too sophisticated; they don't trust people; they think people have motives for telling them things. A lot of times you can miss a good story that way."

"People who have visited Bishop say that he has enough research material on hand to write his column forever without leaving home. Sometimes he writes one off the top of his head; I have one coming out in a week about my father. When he reads it, he won't speak to me for a week."

"The motel where he stayed in Charlotte had put up a sign: 'Welcome Jim Bishop.' 'Gee,' he said, 'look at that.' But he liked it."

End of play. The ladies here laugh uproariously every time they read it. The only thing that hurts is that J. A. C. Dunn writes so well. Of one thing you may be certain: When I take over the Charlotte Observer, my first duty will be to make sure that what's Dunn is done...

The Congressional elections have been overwhelmed by the astonishing personal and political upheavals of the Presidential election, but this will have to change if we are to have a Government that can govern, and the students obviously have an opportunity to do something about this if they will take a wider view of the problem.

JIM BISHOP

Funny --And Accurate

O.K., I surrender. This is not my idea; it is a product of the silly women in my family. In the mail, they received a copy of a column written by J.A.C. Dunn of the Charlotte Observer. It consisted of Mr. Dunn's notions about me, Writers who write about writers are, at best, editorially incestuous. But my family thinks it is funny. And--God help me--accurate.

Bishop

has aged since that picture was taken. His jowls have thickened, his eyes and mouth are less finely molded, and the slicked-back gray hair now looks like a salvo of shaving cream.

"But his face still has that infinitely patient and unshakably challenging 'Oh, yeah?' look, laced with a hint of infinite compassion, a silent statement of an axiom: 'You're human and I love you but if you want to buck me, bring a cannon.'"

"He was deeply tanned and dressed like the chairman of something: black scotch grain buckled shoes, black socks, black suit with cuffless trousers, white ribbed shirt with a gold collar pin and big square gold cufflinks, black tie with tiny white polka dots; very tidy--on-the-door, carpet-on-the-floor."

"But his sky-blue eyes have all the pampered softness of police car bubble lights, and his suntan and thick, hard hands make you think of Hemingway's Old Man, strayed uptown from the sea. He will be 61 the day before the fifth anniversary of Kennedy's assassination, and he has traveled across more maps than most people ever pick up at a filling station, but his Jersey City accent is as permanent as his skull."

"His tall, blonde, serenely dignified wife and their two slender, leggy teen-age daughters were with him. Karen, the older girl, wanted to hold his arm walking through the airport lobby, but Bishop let somebody get between them. She gave him a brief glance of controlled pique, and then cooled off. Bishop didn't notice. He is not a man who worries about women's mercurial moods."

"When he became a reporter on the New York Daily Mirror he made it a habit to read a page of Hemingway--any page--before going out on an assignment, to soak up style and technique. The gimmick worked and stuck; Bishop at his best performs stonemasonry with language, the pieces so neatly fitted that verbal mortar is unnecessary."

"His output is steady and large. Since 1945 he has published 13 books, both fiction and non-fiction. He has worked as a newspaper feature writer and as assistant to the late columnist Mark Hellinger, as an editor of Colliers and Liberty Magazines and for various Catholic literary enterprises, and has written countless articles for national magazines. The thrice-weekly column is as ceaseless as saw."

His newest book, a Bishop-style, tell-it-like-it-is, minute-by-minute account of what happened in Dallas the day Kennedy was killed, has been a making since two days after the assassination. Its 250,000 words are a distillation of 6,500,000 words of reading and several hundred interviews.

His view of reporting as a profession has not changed in four decades, he says. His professional ethics are as bone-simple as his prose: tell exactly what happened, and nothing more--nothing less, either. Writing a column is slightly different, of course: "A columnist is just a reporter with an opinion."

Young reporters just out of journalism school are too suspicious, says Bishop, "too sophisticated; they don't trust people; they think people have motives for telling them things. A lot of times you can miss a good story that way."

"People who have visited Bishop say that he has enough research material on hand to write his column forever without leaving home. Sometimes he writes one off the top of his head; I have one coming out in a week about my father. When he reads it, he won't speak to me for a week."

"The motel where he stayed in Charlotte had put up a sign: 'Welcome Jim Bishop.' 'Gee,' he said, 'look at that.' But he liked it."

End of play. The ladies here laugh uproariously every time they read it. The only thing that hurts is that J. A. C. Dunn writes so well. Of one thing you may be certain: When I take over the Charlotte Observer, my first duty will be to make sure that what's Dunn is done...

Fights for Political Life

WASHINGTON — John J. Rooney, Democratic Congressman from Brooklyn, one of the most powerful men in America, is in danger of being toppled off his congressional throne.

For the first time in years the crusty, cantankerous Congressman has gone back to Brooklyn to shake hands and make speeches. Hitherto he hasn't worried. Not for years have the voters of the fourteenth New York congressional district seen much of John -- even at election time. He has traveled all over the world inspecting American embassies, checking up on money spent for pencils, caviar, and carbon paper by American diplomats abroad.

Rooney's power results from the fact that he can influence foreign policy abroad and law and order here at home. As chairman of the Appropriations Subcommittee for the State Department and the Justice Department, he can decide how much money they can spend. If he wants to spend less on disarmament, it means the State Department restricts its disarmament negotiations.

He has not permitted any money to be spent for crime research. He believes in arresting criminals more than preventing crime. He has drastically curtailed the antipoverty program, despite the fact that his Brooklyn district benefits from that program. He even voted against setting up a committee in the House of Representatives to pass on congressional ethics.

Recently, however, Rooney has been scared stiff. What has scared him is the fact that an alert young Democrat, Frederick Richmond, is challenging him in the Democratic primary tomorrow. Richmond has been pounding Brooklyn pavements while Rooney was professing not to worry about his re-election.

In retaliation Rooney exhibited a broad streak of vindictiveness. First he threatened Roger Stevens, the White House assistant in charge of arts, to curtail the arts appropriation unless Stevens withdrew from a money-raising reception for Richmond. Then he started an investigation of Richmond.

As a result, he put out confident statements to his Capitol Hill colleagues: "Don't worry. Even if he won, they'd never seat him. We've got his Foundation under investigation."

Mysteriously Rooney was able to get the Subcommittee on Foundations to investigate the Frederick W. Richmond Foundation, a non-profit venture set up by candidate Richmond.

However, the probe has boomeranged. Investigators have been able to get nothing on the Frederick Richmond Foundation except the fact that its directors haven't had a meeting for some time. On the other hand, they discovered that Richmond had spent huge amounts of his own money to relieve slum conditions in Brooklyn. In fact, he's been a one-man slum clearance dynamo -- perhaps the biggest private philanthropist in the United States.

On 114th Street in New York, Richmond has built the biggest private rehabilitation project in the nation -- a total of 458 apartments. His technique is not to move families off the block. This uproots them, and they usually crowd into other slum areas. Instead Richmond is buying up old brownstone houses and beaten-up tenements to revamp them without the tenants moving out. He works on one house at a time so that one family can move into a rebuilt house while its old apartment is being rehabilitated.

In the rear of these houses Richmond is tearing down fences, and instead of having one small backyard per house, he has built a block-long city park. He has also set up training centers, remedial reading rooms and other community activities in the basements of his apartment houses.

This is what Rooney's investigation discovered. Ernst and Ernst, the New York accounting firm, has audited the Foundation's books, concluded that not one dollar was spent for political purposes.

No wonder the cantankerous Congressman from Brooklyn, John Rooney, is worried.

Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, former military aide to President Truman, has given us this correction regarding our recent statement that Harry Truman, as Vice President, had no Secret Service protection:

"In February, 1945," writes Gen. Vaughan, "it seemed to me that almost one hundred Secret Servicemen guarding the President (the entire Roosevelt family, children and grandchildren) and no one guarding the Vice President was not right."

"Without Mr. Truman's knowledge, I talked to Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, and he agreed with me. He assigned three men, George Drescher, John Walker, and a third man, whose name escapes me at the moment, to protect the Vice President."

The Trumans were living at 4701 Connecticut Avenue, and a day or so after the men got on the job, the Vice President said: 'Harry, I've noticed a couple of chaps following me around for the past couple of days. Do you know anything about it?'

"When I explained the facts of life, the Vice President had things to say like, 'At the next meeting of the Cabinet I'll tell Henry to stop that foolishness.'"

"This he did, but the Secretary talked him into letting the Secret Service men continue. Mr. Truman got to enjoy having someone to go along on his early morning walks."

RUSSELL BAKER

Sophisticated Son of Abracadabra

WASHINGTON—What do Vietnam, "The Flying Nun," detergent and marijuana have in common? Magic, for one thing. Each in its own way illustrates an American return to a primitive faith in the black arts which has become increasingly evident during the 1960's.

God may be dead, as the sloganers would have us believe, but interest and belief in the miraculous, the supernatural and the occult now pervade the living room, the hippie pad and the Pentagon. An old-fashioned theologian might say that America had sold its soul to the devil; what it wants from the magic is, after all, trivial at best, sometimes cheap, and occasionally brutal.

Nevertheless, there is considerable evidence that Americans are refusing to accept the consequences of the death of God. If God is dead, then man is forced to make it on his own. Those for whom that is an intolerable demand might reasonably be expected to create substitutes for Divinity in order to persuade themselves that they are not without help more prodigious than any that man can provide for himself.

One consequence is the contemporary eagerness to believe in magic. "Works like magic" is the ultimate pitch for every product from foot powder to hair spray.

Sometimes, as with the TV housewife who turns into a queen by changing her brand of margarine, the pitch is bluntly visual. In virtually every commercial the real message is that everybody can enjoy the services of Cinderella's fairy godmother, whether he wants to change his entire life style or merely get the laundry whiter.

In the past few years magic has become a staple even of mass escapist entertainment. Classically, escape TV works a character into an implausible predicament and then watches while he works himself out of it. With shows like "Be-witched," "The Flying Nun" and "My Favorite Martian," however, there is no longer even the slight suspense of seeing how the characters will solve their problems.

In such shows the pleasure of watching people cope with problems ceases to exist; all problems are solved by magic, and therefore never even become problems. All that is left for the viewer is whatever childish delight he can still take from watching Superman do his familiar old stuff. Probably very few viewers conclude from this that their own problems can be solved by magic, but the mass audience for such entertainment suggests that somebody out there likes the idea of supernatural intervention.

The alchemists of the present day -- the people who believe in the short cut to riches -- are the members of the drug cult. With pot or L.S.D., or something else exotic from the chemical retort, they believe this leaden old world can be turned into instant gold. They talk about it in terms of "expanding consciousness" or "turning on," as though their minds were light bulbs, but what they are really talking about is acquiring a love life that will give them the strength to go on.

It is entrancing to think that chemistry can turn the magic trick in an instant, especially if you doubt your strength or ability to love life for itself, and it is just about as realistic as expecting to turn lead into gold without a nuclear reactor. The teleconsumers, the bombing crowd, the drug cultists -- the love of magic makes some strange bedfellows.

SYLVIA PORTER

The Camping Boom

June marks the opening of the 1968 camping season -- a signal for more than 15,000,000 of us to go off on camping trips and in the process, to spend over $1 billion on travel trailers alone, plus hundreds of millions on camping equipment, on getting to and from the camping grounds, on overnight fees and on other expenses.

Until recently, camping in the U.S. meant stuffing a sleeping bag, some warm clothes, a few cooking utensils and first aid equipment into a rucksack, slinging it over your back and hiking toward the hills. But today, the typical camper travels in a fully-equipped trailer, cooks on gas stoves instead of campfires, watches TV instead of beavers. Today's typical campsite provides living comforts ranging from hot showers to hair dryers, clothes washers to canteens.

Obviously, camping has become a significant business in the outdoor recreation industry and also a significant expense to the individual camper or camping family.

As one measure of camping's spectacular growth just in this decade, the new 1968 Rand McNally Guidebook to Campgrounds lists 12,000 campgrounds in the U.S. and Canada (with 450,000 individual campsites), 2,000 more campgrounds than last year and up from only 5,000 campgrounds listed in 1961. Today, Rand McNally also counts 9,000 camping areas specifically set up to accommodate travel trailers, with 250,000 separate sites for trailers.

By 1980, the Interior Dept's Bureau of Outdoor Recreation predicts, camping will become the second fastest growing outdoor activity in this country, outpaced only by water skiing. Between now and the year 2000, the Bureau also predicts, camping will grow by a phenomenal 238 per cent.

A fundamental force propelling the camping surge is the familiar one, the steady liberalization of company policies covering vacations and holidays.

Another factor, clearly, is the relentless urban-suburbanization of our country, leading in turn to a need on the part of millions to get out of the city and the suburbs and to head for what wilderness is left. A third obvious factor is that, next to staying home, camping is about the cheapest way there is for a family to spend a holiday or a vacation.

What camping guides are basic for you?

If you're the back-to-nature type and really prefer to rough it, you can take your family on a camping trip by foot or by canoe in any one of thousands of national and state parks for as little as $50 a week, assuming you don't go too far from home and you already own basic equipment such as cooking utensils, sleeping bags and back packs.

Even if you have to rent these basics, the total cost for a family of three or four needn't run over $75 a week.

But if you prefer the "motel in the wilderness" type of camping, involving rented travel trailers, overnight fees at private campgrounds, electricity and gas bills, etc. -- costs can rise to $300 or more a week. If you're considering taking your first camping expedition, your best bet is to avoid an outlay of hundreds of dollars to buy trailers, tents, etc. Rent them instead.

Don't even start to buy until you find out whether or not you like the whole idea of camping and, if so, what style of camping you enjoy most.

Colleges and the Congress

The college year of 1967-68 has now ended. The great adventure in the universities to transform American politics and elect a President acceptable to the young and the poor is not achieving its goals. The Old Politics and the familiar figures are prevailing over the new, but the campus movement has not failed.

It has demonstrated that the idealism and energy of college students, working within the system, can influence even if they cannot dominate the decisions of the parties, the candidates and the electorate. They helped bring about the withdrawal of President Johnson. They propelled McCarthy into the forefront of American politics, and they still have an important role to play in the campaign.

The danger now is that they will scatter for the summer and, in their disappointments, leave the field to the pros. Having failed to win everything, they may feel they can do nothing; but there are two things they can still do: They can help boost McCarthy and Rockefeller in the popularity polls, which are now the main hope of stopping Nixon and Humphrey, and they can organize and work for the improvement of the Congress.

The close Congressional races are particularly sensitive to the personal house-to-house canvassing techniques of intelligent and energetic young people. These local races do not have the glamour of the national Presidential contests, but in the end the election of a Congress in tune with the scope and menace of contemporary problems may prove to be more important than the selection of the next President.

Whatever you think of Humphrey, Nixon, McCarthy and Rockefeller, they all have a more accurate and wider vision of what must be done to suppress the destructive forces at home and abroad than most members of the present Congress. In fact, the most alarming political prospect before the nation is that the next President, whoever he is, will be confronted by a host of radical problems, and a majority of conservative Congressmen who will neutralize and maybe even paralyze the power of the White House.

Something can be done about this, particularly by young people. It is not hard to identify the spectacular underdogs on Capitol Hill. They are, in fact, unavoidable, and while many of them are firmly rooted in one-party districts, many others in closely contested districts are highly vulnerable.

What is needed to bring many of them down is nothing more than a decision by the college students in their districts to organize and work for the other candidate, regardless of party. Even if "the other candidate" is not ideal, the practical rule of politics is fairly clear. The rule is that, when confronted by a choice between an old Congressional rascal and a new rascal, always vote for the new, because the old has seniority on the committees and, therefore, power.

The urgent need for a great creative effort to get young, vigorous, forward-looking minds into the Congress is plain, and it is actually easier for college students to be decisive in many Congressional races than in the Presidential race.

The political amateurs from the universities can quickly be swallowed up in the vast arena of a continental nation, but a few hundred students, or even a few score, can be a powerful instrument operating in a Congressional district against a visible numbskull.

In the university communities, the anxiety about the trend of our affairs is apparent. A series of momentous and tragic events has shattered the complacency of the past. The old fatalistic optimism, the assumption of a general forward progress of human events has been checked by the spectacular developments in Vietnam and the American cities. All this dominates the thought and talk of watchful minds.

But talk will not stop the staggering and blundering in Washington and the other Western capitals. The election is going to produce a new President, but the outlook is that it will probably produce much the same old Congress, dominated by a conservative coalition, and vigorous action will have to be taken soon if this is to be avoided.

The Congressional elections have been overwhelmed by the astonishing personal and political upheavals of the Presidential election, but this will have to change if we are to have a Government that can govern, and the students obviously have an opportunity to do something about this if they will take a wider view of the problem.

Blacks Urge More Involvement On Part of White America

(c) N. Y. Times News Service By JOHN A. HAMILTON

(Mr. Hamilton is a member of the editorial board of the Times)

DETROIT—Sinking almost to his ankles in the velvet carpet of the Pontchartrain Hotel's Versailles Ballroom, a black, bearded, beaklike leader of alienated ghetto youths confronted white America here the other day. His message needs heading.

"We are in a crisis! We are in an emergency!" shouted the Rev. Jesse James, an ex-convict and former addict who had been selected spokesman by his own San Francisco mission rebels as well as by Thugs United of New Orleans, the Conservative Vice, Lords of Chicago, the new Thug Group of Washington, D.C., and a dozen or more other neighborhood groups—some quite new, some only modified versions of old street gangs.

Representatives of these groups, all involved in slum improvement projects, had been invited by Urban America Inc. to participate in discussions with its prestigious board of trustees, bankers and corporate executives, their wives and guests at the annual meeting of this nonprofit organization devoted to easing domestic tensions.

There was sharp incongruity between some of the blue-jeaned participants and the posh Pontchartrain. Scones and a handsome clock imported from France decorated an Italian marble lobby. Huge crystal chandeliers hang in the ballroom and reflect from its long, mirrored walls.

James wore a mission rebel's button on his blue beret and his green knit sports shirt seemed more green against the background of crystal, silver and white linen, the ladies in dark silks and the men in conservative worsteds who sat around luncheon tables to hear a panel discussion on urban coalition problems.

Participants on the panel included Christian A. Herter Jr., head of the New York City coalition, Herman Wrice, black co-chairman of the Philadelphia Coalition and representatives of the Detroit and Washington, D.C., groups. The moderator, was John W. Gardner, former secretary of health, education and welfare and now national head of the urban coalition.

James, having waved his arm frantically for attention from the side of the room, moved

House Committee Finds Little Hunger But Widespread Malnutrition

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Agriculture Committee concludes in a report that there is very little actual hunger in the United States but there is widespread malnutrition caused largely by poor people's ignorance.

The 79-page document made public Sunday is based on and contains replies from health officials in 181 counties in 19 states.

"In not one single county of those responding were there current cases of starvation reported and few instances of hunger as a result of inability to buy food or receive public assistance, but in many there were stories of people, especially children, suffering malnutrition," the report says.

It continues:

"The few reported cases of starvation which had occurred in the past were believed to have resulted from deliberate negligence by parents."

"Almost all of the hunger and malnutrition cases were blamed on ignorance by parents as to what constituted a balanced diet."

"Several instances were reported of welfare clients throwing to the dogs foods which they themselves could be eating but were not eating because they simply had no knowledge of nutritional requirements and did not like the particular food which had been provided them."

Rep. W. R. Poage, D-Tex., the committee chairman, ordered the study after a citizens' group reported in April that there is

State's Black Citizens Eager for Jobs, Training

HARRISBURG (AP) — Forty per cent of the people appealing to the Governor's Branch Offices for succor wanted either jobs or better employment, the coordinator of the program says.

This proves, says the coordinator, F. Clinton McKay, "that there can be no question any longer that the black citizens in the ghettos of Pennsylvania are eager for jobs, job training and better jobs."

The 19 branch offices were opened in low-income areas in 12 of the commonwealth's cities after last summer's racial disturbances. They serve as centers for information, complaints and referrals.

McKay gave this breakdown of the problems and complaints received from 18,688 persons during the program's nine months of existence:

Employment — The greatest number, 7,484, or 40 per cent, either sought jobs or complained of discrimination in hiring, dismissal and lay-offs and difficulties with employers and unions.

Financial — Nearly 14 per cent of the persons complained of financial problems. These included lack of money for commodities such as clothing, furniture, food, medical care and shelter. Others sought financial aid for education or training.

Housing — 12.8 per cent of the complaints were about inability to find suitable housing, or difficulties with landlords, real estate people, neighbors and eviction notices.

General — 17.3 per cent registered what McKay called "general complaints" or requested information. The Branch Offices made 10,477 referrals to other agencies or organizations between Aug. 1, 1967 and May 4 of this year.

Legal — about 6.1 per cent were concerned with police or other legal problems such as leases, contracts, familial and marital problems, surety bonds and frauds.

Agencies — 5.7 per cent complained of unsatisfactory or discriminatory treatment or practice by a public or private agency.

Miscellaneous — problems areas with few requests of help were: community health and safety, 391 persons; medical services, 254 persons; education, 226 persons. Only 154 persons—fewer than 1 per cent—came with non-legal marital or familial troubles.

Symbol of Pa. Industry Exposition Will Be 'Tangle of Steel'

HARRISBURG (AP) — The symbol of the first Pennsylvania Industry Exposition will be a 12-foot high tangle of steel, which its prospective creator calls "direct metal sculpture" and the show's promoters label "junk."

Both judgments are valid, inasmuch as the sculpture has not yet been built. Visitors to the fair June 26-27 at the Farm Show Building here will be able to view the work in progress.

Spectators are also urged to bring a hunk of steel with them. Sculptor Donald B. Wright, an assistant professor of fine arts at the Altoona campus of Penn State University, says he will depend entirely on metallic contributions.

The theme of the exposition is "Think Pennsylvania." The promoters reason, since steel is the state's chief product, that the centerpiece should consist entirely of pieces of that alloy from all parts of the commonwealth.

"I want that old steel blade from a long-dead lawnmower, or the head that fell off a hammer — just so it's made of steel," said Wright, who, with welding rod in hand, will begin joining unrelated objects together on June 25.

The sculpture is to be finished June 29, in time for it to inspire the public to "Think Pennsylvania."

The Pennsylvania State Chamber of Commerce expects more than 30,000 businessmen and 100,000 visitors to view 300 exhibits during the fair's five-day run.

Niel Thomas, exposition news secretary, says the purpose of Census Survey the fair is to induce industry, state and federal governments to "Think Pennsylvania" when they locate plants or award contracts.

"California is killing us when it comes to contracts," Thomas added.

The fair is said to be only the second of its type in the nation. A similar exposition has been held in Florida annually for the past seven years and has assisted in that state's development, Thomas said.

In addition to the sculpture-in-progress, industry related curiosities at the fair will be offered by the Scott Paper Co., which will turn toilet paper into pulp and then back to paper in public. Also, Kinney Shoes will hold a shoemaking contest among its employees.

THE FOURTH PITTSBURGH JAZZ FESTIVAL takes place this coming Saturday and Sunday, June 22nd and 23rd in the Pittsburgh Arena - - - It was written of some time ago in this column; so long back, that I thought a reminder might be a good deed for those who don't want to miss it - - - It is being produced by George T. Wein, the creator of the very, very famous Newport Festivals; sponsored by the Pittsburgh Catholic Youth Organization (as one of its community projects) and co-sponsored by the Pittsburgh Diocesan Human Relations Commission, according to John J. Wright, Bishop of Pittsburgh. The roster of musicians includes Charles Ray, singer, pianist, composer, organist, and alto saxophonist; Herbie Mann, whose instruments are the flute and saxophone; Thelonious Sphere Monk, who is said to rank with the greatest of figures in the history of jazz; Gary Burton, vibes; Dionne Warwick, vocalist; Wes Montgomery, acclaimed as the world's greatest jazz guitarist; Cannonball Adderley, alto saxophonist, who with his quintet has toured Japan, Europe and England. The co-sponsoring commission seems to feel "that in the past four years the Jazz Festival has been a strong force in the community of Pittsburgh for the betterment of interracial relations" and notes also that the event celebrates "the country's only native art form."

AN OPEN HOUSE will celebrate the Golden Anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Wienold of 120 Kinzua road on Saturday, June 22nd, at the Woman's Club from 2 to 5 p. m. The reception is being given by Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Smith of Warren, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Bennett of Hilton, N. Y.

MINIATURES: The Pre-School Mothers Club held its June picnic at Wades Woods, where the members enjoyed the facilities of the new swimming pool and the pavilion. They report a wonderful time was had by all.

Ann Landers

Answers Your Problems

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My heart ached for that young bride who had circles under her pretty blue eyes because her snoring groom kept her awake until dawn. I'd like to offer a solution that worked for my Aunt Emma and Uncle Wallace. She thought it up herself.

Aunt Emma read up on snoring and found out that most people snore because their mouths flop open and a piece of loose tissue flutters when the person breathes. She concluded that if she could keep Uncle Wallace's mouth shut the problem would be solved.

So Aunt Emma took strips of muslin and tied Uncle Wallace's mouth shut every evening just before bedtime. They are both gone now but they were happily married for 45 years.

Please print this letter. It could save some marriages.—WESTCHESTER

DEAR WESTY: Strips of muslin only? No embalming fluid? Your uncle must have been a saint to tolerate such treatment.

Sorry, I can't endorse your "solution." Tying a man's mouth shut could lead to problems more serious than snoring. He couldn't say "I love you" or anything.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am 22 and have been happily married for three years. My husband will soon be leaving for Vietnam. Recently he asked me if I would remarry if something should happen to him. I am a realistic person and I believe in telling the truth. I replied, "Yes, I think I probably would." He looked shocked at first and then he became angry and shouted, "I couldn't stand the thought of someone else having you—and living off my insurance in the bargain."

This really hurt me, Ann. It isn't as if I'd be looking for anyone. It's just that since I'm so young and we have no children I don't think I should spend the rest of my life in mourning. Am I wrong to feel this way? Should I have lied to make him feel good? I'd appreciate your opinion. — HONEST BUT GUILTY.

DEAR H. BUT G.: Questions that start with "What would you do if—" are best answered this way: "It's impossible to predict what I would do if—. I'd have to wait and see."

DEAR ANN LANDERS: What has become of front doors? I am getting sick and tired of being told when I ring the front bell—"Please go to the back door. I just scrubbed the entrance hall." I always wonder for whom the entrance hall was scrubbed—Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip, maybe?

Recently I was just about to ring the front bell when the electric doors of the attached garage flew open. "Come in through the garage," a voice ordered. "We just put down new carpeting." I was brought up with carpeting and I'm not a pig who doesn't know enough to wipe my shoes on the doormat before entering a home. Furthermore, I've always been under the impression that side doors and back doors were for tradespeople and servants.

What should a person say to let the host know he resents second-class treatment?—P.Z.D.

DEAR P.Z.D.: If you resent being relegated to the side or back door, say so. Sometimes people have no way of knowing that their behavior is offensive until they are told. So tell 'em.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband's six-year-old nephew is wrecking our marriage. Last weekend the boy walked on our couch with his muddy shoes, wrote on our hall walls with red crayon, tore up three new magazines and ripped apart my flowered hat.

Yesterday I told my husband I was going to whale the tar out of that kid if he ruined anything else. He said, "You can't touch him. He's not your child." Is he right? — BOILING

DEAR BOILING: Children who are permitted to run wild and destroy property grow up to be a problem to themselves and to everyone else. You should insist that the child behave in your home or not come back, and your husband should back you up. Where's this poor kid's mother, anyway?

At the recent meeting of Warren Grange No. 1025, conducted by Master Myron Rapp, the charter was draped in honor of the late Sara McClements. The literary program was given by several members, and Kathryn Koebly read "Something To Ponder"; and Twila A. McDowell gave "Choice Bits of Thoughts"; humorous twists were given by Zella Wood, Tillie Andersen, Catherine Stockdill, Katherine Nuhfer, and Edith Briggs. All concluded the program with a group song.

The next meeting will be tonight at 8 o'clock in the grange hall and all officers are requested to be present for "Drill Practice."

Local Women Attend Annual Harrisburg Convention

Recently, the Warren County Federated Democratic Women's Club of Warren County was represented at the annual convention in Harrisburg by Violet Bancroft and Mary McCracker. The event was held at the Penn Harris Hotel from Sunday, June 2, to Wednesday, June 5. The first thing scheduled, after registration and obtaining the individual packets, was an Art Exhibit by Sylvia Dion on Sunday evening from 5:30 to 6:30.

Further Sunday night entertainment included "The World of Carl Sandburg" by the Germantown Theatre Guild of Philadelphia. Monday opened with a general session at which the president of the Pennsylvania Federation of Democratic Women, Rita W. Kane, presided. That afternoon those attending the session heard Betty Furness, assistant to the President for Consumer Affairs, urge the women to "identify yourselves as consumers . . . You think of yourselves as doctors, lawyers, housewives, but rarely as consumers." She went on to say, the term must become personal; it must become part of the family vocabulary. Her talk was followed by an interesting question and answer period.

Senator and Mrs. Joseph S. Clark hosted a cocktail party from 6 to 7:30 for the entertainment of candidates, officers, delegates, alternates and guests, which was followed by a banquet for candidates from all over the state. President Kane presided and the Honorable Thomas Z. Minshart, state chairman, introduced the speakers: The Honorable Grace M. Sloan, the Honorable William F. Carcone, the Honorable Robert P. Casey, the Honorable Joseph B. Clark.

After a Press breakfast on Tuesday morning in the Governor's room, the workshop sessions were followed by a Regional Directors luncheon. Later that afternoon the election of officers took place, and one of the Warren delegates, Violet Bancroft, had the honor of nominating her friend, Mae Smith of Easton, who was duly elected a vice president.

Ex-Governor George Leader and Mrs. Leader gave a cocktail party on Tuesday evening and the guests took the opportunity to renew old friendships and make new ones.

The delegates also heard the Honorable Genevieve Blatt from the Federal Office of Economic Opportunity who informed her audience on the subject of "Project FIND."

The convention closed on Wednesday, June 5, when the news of Senator Robert F. Kennedy was made known to those assembled.

Linda Jones, Donald Millspaw Pledge Vows Saturday

The Sugar Grove Methodist Church was the setting for the nuptial service which united in marriage Linda Fern Jones and Donald Frank Millspaw on Saturday, June 15, at 2 p. m. The Rev. T. E. Spofford, pastor, read the double ring wedding rites in the presence of one hundred and fifty guests.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rex Jones of R. D. 3, Sugar Grove, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Millspaw of Cone-wago Valley, N. Y.

The candlelit altar had basket arrangements of lilies, peonies, chrysanthemums and ferns.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride appeared in a cage gown of organza over a taffeta skimmer, featuring a scalloped batteau neckline, brief sleeves, and a cathedral train. Appliques of peau d'ange lace enhanced the gown and a wide center insertion and complete border of the lace enriched the graceful train. Her bouffant veil of silk illusion was secured by a circular cluster of organza florets with pearls and an organza bow. She carried a white Testament topped with roses.

The maid of honor was Miss Janice Mitchell of Ashville, N. Y., the niece of the bride, in yellow net over chiffon, and a headress of organza leaves. Dressed similarly, but in blue, were the bridesmaids Miss Dianne Johnson of Akeley, Miss Roberta Tower, and the junior bridesmaid, Miss Teresa Shaffer, niece of the bride. Mistress Robin Shaffer, also a niece, was dressed in yellow. All carried Testaments topped with roses.

The best man for his brother was Kenneth Millspaw and ushers were Roger Millspaw, his brother, and Donald Jones, brother of the bride. The junior usher, another brother of the groom, was Martin Millspaw; the ringbearer was a cousin of the groom, Master Kevin Schaumann.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Jones wore a dress of blue and white dotted jersey with white accessories. Mrs. Millspaw chose blue nylon over satin. Mrs. Ruth Smith and Mrs. Mabel Vincent, grandmothers, were also present.

A reception was held in the parlors of the church after the wedding service. Decorations were carried out in blue and white. Mistress of ceremonies was Mrs. Ada Mitchell, sister of the bride, and aides were Edith and Phyllis Hamilton, Mrs. Marylou LaBarre, Miss Jeanette Crosby.

Upon their return from a honeymoon to an undisclosed destination, the new Mr. and Mrs. Millspaw will reside at 739 East 2nd street, Jamestown, N. Y.

The bride attended Eisenhower High School and was employed at the New Process Company. The groom is a graduate of Randolph Central School.

Hints From Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

If you prop up one leg of an electric fry pan (I use the base of my counter-top can opener), you can:

Make relatively grease-free hamburgers by frying them on the high side and letting the grease run down to form a little "well" on the low side where you can skim it off easily.

Fry bacon, then keep it warm on the high side while frying eggs on the lower side.

Or sauté onions in the grease that runs down from whatever meat you're browning in the higher side.

Mrs. J. N.

Well, bless Beas, if that doesn't beat all!

Such a simple trick, yet I'm almost willing to wager that most of us with electric skillets never thought of doing this to save that extra pan or to cut down on grease intake.

You're the greatest! A great big God bless to you.

Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Anyone with a "bed wetter" who sleeps in a regular size bed has quite a sheet-changing job.

My solution is to make the bed in the normal manner except for the bottom sheet. Instead of tucking the bottom part under the mattress, simply fold it back to the center. Then when you have to remove the bottom sheet (which is usually the only one that gets wet), simply pull all your covers back to the bottom of the bed, replace the wet sheet and pull the covers back up. This saves tearing off blankets and top sheet which I did for years 'til I finally got wise.

Faithful Reader

DEAR HELOISE:

I have always had trouble with elastic loop buttonholes when I tried to replace them. (They usually pull away from the stitches.)

I've found a way to remedy this, though.

I fold a piece of seam tape with the ends of the elastic inside and stitch it several doctors in economics at American University in Washington, D. C.

Pre-nuptial affairs were given by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ferre and by Mr. and Mrs. William George. The rehearsal dinner was held in the Riverview Room of the Parkway Inn, Niagara Falls.

Out-of-town guests attended from Warren, Penna.; State College, Penna.; Vienna, Va.; and Hillcrest Heights, Md.

8th Annual Antiques Show At Meadville

The Heritage Room of the Holiday Inn, (Routes 322 and 19) at Meadville will again be the setting for the annual Antiques Show and Sale at Meadville. The Atkinson twins of Edinboro will be honorary hostesses for this eighth of the annual shows which opens on Tuesday, June 18, and continues through Wednesday, June 19.

There is an interesting history in connection with the twins who are named, Prissana, meaning Mystery of Life, and Napit, meaning Heaven. They were born Siamese twins in Thailand and had no names at all until they were two years old. At that time doctors and professors of Thailongkorn University named them. They began their life in Thailand. They were brought to the United States for separation by Mrs. Ellis Atkinson and then returned to Thailand. They were adopted by Mrs. Atkinson and the late Mr. Atkinson and returned to the United States and became citizens of this country.

Mrs. Atkinson taught them pride in their native Thailand, and, since proceeds from the show and sale this year will go directly to missionaries in Thailand, it was decided to ask the girls to be hostesses for the show.

Proceeds from the show will go directly to the Rev. and Mrs. Norman Roadarmel in Thailand for whatever they deem urgent that is not provided for in their budget. Last year's proceeds bought an air conditioning unit for an operating room at Dr. Boonta's hospital at Prae, Thailand.

This year the most urgent need is salary for an office worker to take applications and process loans to hill farmers. Church World Service has ample funds for loans to hill farmers to establish them in dairy farming rather than rice growing. However, no provisions were made for handling the applications. This year's proceeds will underwrite the salary for one year for a university trained office worker to handle this.

The Antiques Show and Sale will feature the best selection of antiques ever offered in the locale. Two dealers will have furniture and 20 other dealers will have other select pieces. Gerry Moyer, Oil City, and Singing Pines Antiques of Wexford will have dry sinks, cupboards, tables and unique and decorative pieces of furniture, along with many wooden items.

Oriental rugs also will be available at the sale. Mrs. Ethel Hazo of Pittsburgh, who handles oriental rugs of all sizes, color and origin, will be at the sale. She also offers a repair service for oriental rugs.

Ruth Royce of Chagrin Falls, Ohio, will offer an extensive selection of antique jewelry and James Barnes of Waterford will have a good selection of watches and some select jewelry for sale and on display.

Art glass also will be available, along with fine china, silver, flatware and hollow ware and cut glass which will be displayed by Ruth Coalmer of Youngstown and Fred and Jean Burns of Lowellville, Ohio.

Mackintosh Antiques of Erie will feature oriental antiques as well as choice assorted items. Hemlock Hills Antiques of Allison Park will feature unique decorative items.

Thelss Antiques of Cambridge Springs will offer a service of hand painted shades to match lamp base. This will be in addition to lamps and other antiques. Alden Lee Miller of South Meadville, also primarily a lamp dealer, will have a rare, three-tiered yellow satin glass lamp, a selection of Peg Lamps and several banquet lamps.

Early American and Primitive, Civil War items, papers and letters, paintings and old prints, brass and copper items of all descriptions, dolls and old toys and all sorts of unusual collectibles will be in the displays of Fort LeBoeuf Antiques of Waterford, the Williams and Mary of Lockwood, Ohio; Ungers Antiques of Meadville; Shreve's Antiques, Riceville; Weaver Shop, Pittsburgh; Heritage Antiques and Country Store, Hartstown; and Pine Antiques, Meadville.

Special items of interest to men will be displayed and sold by Hoffmasters Antiques of Youngstown, Ohio. These will include unusual lamps for the recreation room, featuring such items as the old pitcher pump, railroad switch lanterns, candle molds, etc., as the lamp base. He also has a good selection of mirrors.

F. Parizeau of Bedford, Ohio, will have coins of the Renaissance Period and later in addition to other items of interest.

The public is invited to attend the show - whether or not they wish to purchase any items. Donations of 75 cents will be received at the door.

Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Moore and their sons, Bill and Jim, are the managers of the show. They reside at 687 Highland Ave., Meadville. They are the originators of antique shows in Meadville and are members of the Crawford County Antique Dealers Assn., Crawford County.

PHOTOSENSITIZATION

Q. Late last summer I experienced a severe sunburn following very brief exposure to the sun. This had never happened before. A doctor diagnosed the condition as photosensitization. Exactly what does this mean?

A. Photosensitization is the process by which body cells or tissue (in this case, the skin) become highly sensitive to light waves which would ordinarily produce little or no reaction. Various substances, including certain drugs, chemicals and plants, can induce photosensitization. Some toilet soaps contain additives which are known to cause photosensitization in some people.

SANDPAPER SURGERY

Q. As a teenager I had severe acne which left my face quite pitted. Would sandpaper surgery help?

A. Sandpaper surgery (dermabrasion or skin planing) has generally lost favor among dermatologists. One prominent skin doctor says that the procedure was doomed to failure from the start because of two factors. One, in order to plane deeply enough to remove many or most pitted scars on the face, the surgical procedure itself will produce scars. Secondly, improvement is limited and not easily recognized since some scars and pits remain.

Prescriptions called for promptly and delivered quickly.

BEWARE OF TOO MUCH SUN

Too much sun can turn an anticipated pleasurable vacation into days of ceaseless pain and discomfort. With just a little caution and a good suntan product, you can prevent both agony and days of unsightly peeling of your skin. Expose yourself to the sun, with plenty of a good suntan preparation lightly patted on the skin, for a short time to start. Then as your suntan develops take more sun each day.

Watch out for those foggy days with the sun hidden. Ultra-violet rays can filter through to give you a burn. Protect your eyes with a pair of sunglasses, created to filter out most of the harmful ultra-violet rays. Stop in and we will be glad to help you select dependable protection against the sun.

MODESTY FORBIDS

extolling all the virtues of a Flameless Electric Water Heater

But here are a few...

- FLAMELESS, no soot, no fumes
- SAFETY, no pilot light failures
- GOES ANYWHERE, no flue or vent
- QUIET, like a light bulb
- COMPLETELY INSULATED, cool!
- LASTS LONGER, no hot spots.

OK... but how much does it cost to operate? . . .
Well, first . . . Penelec's special low water heating rate allows 600 KWH at 1.1c per KWH.

Translated, this means . . . if there are four in your family and you use 1,200 gallons per month (that's average)...

| and your present monthly bill is | the additional cost of water heating will be about |
|----------------------------------|--|
| $ 6.68 | $3.30 |
| $ 8.68 | $2.85 |
| $10.68 | $2.40 |
| $12.68 | $1.95 |

Use the ticket on your tank . . . It's still worth $15 cash on a new electric water heater that's 40 gal. or larger.

U.S. Golf Girls Keep Curtis Cup

NEWCASTLE, Northern Ireland (AP) — The golfing girls of the United States left Sunday for France with the Curtis Cup still in their possession.

The girls play a European team at St. Cloudy Wednesday and Thursday.

The United States defeated the British Isles by 10½ to 7½ over the subarked Royal County Down links which stretch 6,535 yards and carry a par of 38-38-76.

The seven American girls will return to England Friday after playing the European team to prepare for an assault on the British Women's Amateur championship. That takes place at Walton Heath, about 25 miles south of London, June 25-29. Phyllis Preuss, of Pampano Beach, Fla., had the best record on the United States Curtis Cup, winning her three matches.

So. Cal. NCAA Champs

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Southern California's NCAA baseball champions may or may not rate with the top teams in College World Series history, but Coach Rod Dedeaux says "no USC team had a greater sense of pride."

"It's true we don't have as many outstanding players as past USC championship teams," said the 53-year-old head man. "But I've never had a team that kept coming from behind like this one."

"We were behind in four out of five games here and won them all," he said. "Each time a different guy did it."

Pat Kuehner did it Saturday night, smashing a two-run, 375-foot triple off the fence in right center, with two out and two strikes on him. It gave USC a 4-3 victory over Southern Illinois and its fifth NCAA baseball title.

Harrison hit a three-run homer off reliever Mike Paul in the eighth and scored behind pinch hitters Jerry Adair and George Scott, who had walked.

Petrocelli rapped a two-run homer in the seventh to give Boston a 2-1 lead but Joe Azcue's pinch single in the eighth tied it for Cleveland.

Lomborg gave up two singles toookie Bill Harris and another to Jim Hall before Bill Landis took over in the sixth.

Landis walked Jose Vidal and Tom Harper in the seventh and Azcue rapped a two-out single, scoring Vidal to tie it. Then Harrison's homer put Boston on top to stay.

ACTION AT STATELINE

Stateline Speedway had its Kiddies Night, and more than 1,000 youngsters took advantage of the opportunity to view the races. Four cars were involved in this action shot. The evening was highlighted with prizes for the kids, ranging from bikes and helicopter rides to Jarts games and doughnuts. (Photo by Mahan)

National League

Bucs Win 5th Straight

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Manny Jimenez' two-run single keyed a four-run burst in the fifth inning that sparked Pittsburgh to an 11-2 romp over Houston Sunday, completing a doubleheader sweep for the Pirates and extending their winning streak to five games.

Successful fourth inning doubles by Jose Pagan and Maury Wills sent the Pirates to a 3-1 victory in the opener. The Double setback ran the Astros' losing string to five.

Mets and Giants Split

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Mets crossed up manager Herman Franks' lefty-righty pitching strategy Sunday, pushing across two runs in the first inning of the nightcap and going on to defeat San Francisco 3-1 for a split of their doubleheader.

Home runs by Willie Mays and Jack Hattbacked Ray Sadecki's five-hit pitching as the Giants took the opener 4-1.

Ex-Red Sinks Cincy

ST. LOUIS (AP) — John Edwards climaxed a fifth inning rally with a two-run single that helped St. Louis to a 4-2 victory over his former teammates, the Cincinnati Reds, Sunday.

The Cardinals trailed, 2-0, going into the fifth inning. Dal Maxvill singled, pitcher Ray Washburn walked and Lou Brock's single scored Maxvill. Washburn and Brock advanced on an infield out and both scored on Edwards' hit. Julian Javier singled an insurance run home in the eighth.

Skinner's Debut Spoiled

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Bob Bailey scored the deciding run on a passed ball in the fourth inning and Jim Brewer's clutch relief pitching carried the Los Angeles Dodgers past Philadelphia 2-1 Sunday.

The setback spoiled the National League managerial debut of Bob Skinner, who replaced Gene Mauch as the Phils' skipper Saturday.

Braves Win in 11th

ATLANTA (AP) — Joe Torre's 11th inning double scored Hank Aaron from first base, giving the Atlanta Braves a 1-0 victory over the Chicago Cubs Sunday.

With one out in the 11th, Chicago reliever Chuck Hartenstein walked Aaron and Torre broke the scoreless deadlock with a double to right center.

Rookie Jim Britton, who replaced knuckleballer Phil Niekro in the 10th, picked up his third victory in four decisions.

Niekro scattered seven hits before departing at the start of the 10th. The Braves managed just five hits off Chicago starter Ferguson Jenkins, who left for a pinch hitter in the 11th. But both clubs blew earlier scoring opportunities.

Yanks Win on Homers

ANAHEIM (AP) — Two-run homers by Horace Clarke and Mickey Mantle in the eighth inning and a defensive gem by right fielder Andy Kosco in the ninth carried the New York Yankees to a 4-3 victory over California Sunday.

The Yankees' third straight victory snapped California's winning string at three games. Clarke's first homer of the season—only his second extra base hit in 202 at bats—followed an infield hit by Bobby Cox and overcame a 1-0 California lead.

Wightman Cup Back in Britain

LONDON (AP) — The Wightman Cup is back in Britain—and United States women's tennis is beginning to count the costs of professionalism.

Without two of their most brilliant girls—Mrs. Billie Jean King and Rosie Casals, now pros—the Americans lost the cup to Britain Saturday for the first time in eight years.

The British won four matches to three but U.S. non-playing captain Mrs. Betty Pratt was not dismayed.

"I knew all along it would be a tough job," Mrs. Pratt said. "It was a desperately close series, and it might have gone either way. Most of our girls are young, and they performed with credit."

"It doesn't happen often that you lose two girls like Billie Jean and Rosie at the same time."

Mrs. King and Miss Casals signed professional contracts three months ago.

Three of the girls who faced Britain in the two-day series at Wimbledon were new to Wightman Cup tennis—Peaches Bartkowicz of Hamtramck, Mich., 19, Kathy Harter of Seal Beach, Calif., 21, and Stephanie De Fina of Hollywood, Fla., 22.

Schnars Wins Late Model At Stateline Kiddies Nite

BUSTI, N.Y. — It was a grand night for all concerned Saturday as over a thousand children attended the sixth annual Kiddies Night here at Stateline Speedway. The feature victories were the main event of the night, however, as Bob Schnars picked up the Late Model win and Ron Blackmer remained undefeated in the Sportsmen class by capturing the first 50-lap Trophy Race for the older class.

Top prize of the evening, a bicycle, went to Karen Sanders, daughter of Bob Sanders, Sugar Grove. In addition every child was given a prize including helicopter rides, baseball gloves, Jarts games and hundreds of other things.

Schnars earned himself an easy win as he moved into the lead in the 4th lap and remained almost a half-lap ahead of the rest of the pack for the final 3 circles. The second spot in the Late Model feature went to Ed Faulkner while Fred Knapp collected third place and fourth spot went to Jim Scott.

Skip Furlow gave Blackmer his best race this season as he remained ahead of the lead foot for the first 25-laps and then stayed hot on his tail for the entire race. Furlow finished second while Lyle Brown coped third and Jim Sloan captured fourth.

There was some speculation as to whether the 50-lap Sportsmen could be run as heavy fog settled in making vision almost impossible. However, the drivers stated that they could see at track level and after the first three laps the hot engines were too much for the fog as it slowly lifted off the oval.

The Kiddies ping-pong ball drop was one of the most exciting events of the night. The zealous children chased the helicopter from one side of the track to the other. However, their little legs soon tired as 500 balls were dropped and the search was on its way.

The victory for Schnars keeps him in the lead in circuit and track points. The new car heats produced just as much action as the grand finale. Clyde Porter was victorious in the first while Emory Mahan captured the second heat and Jim Scott placed first in the final heat race of the evening. The two new car semi-wins went to Stan Stevens and Jim Sloan.

Three heats in the sportsmen class were run with Ken Gehres, Gary Hazzard and Joe Swanson posting victories. The Hoolligan heats went to Ed Baldwin and Ron Stanko. Stanko also captured the feature victory while Bob Patch finished second and Jon Wiedmaier placed third.

THE SPRINTERS

New York, June 16—Joanne Keyser, the 60-yard dash champion, had just won the first heat in a fierce blonde blur, and now some of the girls gathered along a sideline to discuss their chances. Linda Laury, a buxom, red-haired 26-year-old who had never competed before, was flip. "I didn't come to set records," she said, "I came to have fun." Hope Chafee, a young chemist from Chicago, hefted an eight-pound practice shot as if to assure them all that 60-yard dashes were an afterthought with her. But Ella Cox, her long blonde hair tumbling onto her tanned shapely arms, was nervous; Keyser had broken her record and taken her title a year ago. "What do you expect?" Ella snapped, "Keyser is all arms, and young."

The sun boiled out of a pale blue sky, making their wheel chairs hot to the touch. Volunteer officials, like students from Pace College and Queens College, called out names for the next heat. Ella and Hope checked out Linda's chair; the eight-inch front casters had been tightened so the chair would stay in its lane during the race and the brake had been removed so Linda wouldn't inadvertently engage it during her follow-through. She left her pocketbook with Ella, and shrugged, wheeling out among the tape markers that made a wheelchair racecourse from part of the rutted asphalt parking lot behind the Joseph Bulova School of Watchmaking, in Astoria, Queens.

Beyond the parking lot, on a large and grassy field, the archery, discus, shot put and javelin events of the 12th annual National Wheelchair Games moved into the middle rounds. There was a sharp edge to the outdoor competition this year as there had been earlier in the swimming, table tennis, weight lifting and bowling. Among the nearly 300 male and female competitors from 30 states including California were some who had supposedly retired and others who had not been seen since the Kingston, Jamaica Tour in 1966 or even Tokyo in 1964. Everyone wanted a shot at making the American Team for the Paralympics, in Israel in November.

The starter's gun snapped, and Linda got a good start. Her hands moved rhythmically on the outer steel rims of the big back wheels in short, choppy strokes that brought the chair to early speed. The girl in lane 2, the bad lane, foundered in a rut, two others lost strength, and Linda, pumping steadily, long coasting stroke now, took the lead in the stretch and won.

Ella, who had coached her, laughed and clapped until Linda rolled back into the group, flushed and feigning surprise. Her hands shook with excitement as she lit a cigarette. She took charge of Ella's pocketbook and Hope's eight-pound shot as the girls moved out for the next heat.

Ella and Hope qualified for the next round, in the class II competition. This is mainly for polio victims and others whose handicap is somewhere between the incomplete quadruplegics of Class IA and the "Walkers" of Class III who are too crippled to compete in normal athletics but do not necessarily need the wheelchairs from which they must participate in these games.

Ella was stricken with polio at 5, Hope at 8. Both are 23, and they think they had it easier than Linda. Suddenly and mysteriously one morning when she was 13 years old, Linda was unable to rise from the breakfast table.

"Small children make adjustments and friends," said Ella, "and adults, if they don't become embittered, work hard to get their independence back. But teenagers are just at that age when everyone is running off for a pizza, and there's a great tendency to withdraw."

"I had depressions," said Linda, "but not so much over my handicap as over where to go to meet other people like me. I had to function the best I could in an A.P. world. That means Able-Bodies."

Hope nodded, "You never really know what a wheelchair can do until you see other people doing it."

The three girls met as undergraduates at the University of Illinois, which has one of the country's finest rehabilitation centers. Ella and Linda, who both work for the government in Social Security Administration, live together in a standard apartment building, drive cars and bowl and squaredance from chairs. "If you're a good cump you'll do all right," said Linda. "We like to use that word first, before an A.P. does."

The girls, other competitors, and Ben Lipton, director of the Bulova School and a guiding spirit of wheelchair games in this country, insist that sports for the handicapped are now more social and recreational than medical, although they were developed after World War II for therapeutic purposes. A new wave of wheelchair athletes is expected soon, when Vietnam wounded begin leaving hospitals and rehabilitation centers.

Hope and Linda wheeled out again, for their last heat, and Ella said: "You know, we consider this sport, we come here to win and have fun. But A.P.'s don't really understand this even after you give them some big hairy explanation, it comes out sob sister for most people."

Hope drew the bad lane, finished fourth and rolled eagerly back for her shot, but Linda the beginner placed into the semifinals and glowed. She was still smiling as the seasoned Paralympian, Ella, finished her day with a stirring second place behind the unbeatable Joanne Keyser, and then they moved off into a group around a husky young 100-yard dash man who was saying: "Atlantic City is for old people and cripples. Now, I like Ocean City, that's where the action is. How about you?"

GOLFING WITH Arnold Palmer

MOVE RIGHT SHOULDER DOWN AND UNDER TO CORRECT PULLS AND SLICES

If you pull shots to the left or slice them to the right, your fault may be in your shoulder turn on your downswing. If your shoulders turn on 'too level' a plane (illustration #1), you will force your club-head out beyond the ball. You will put a slice spin on the ball if your clubhead is facing straight ahead at impact. If it is looking left, you will get a pulled shot, or maybe a pull hook. At any rate you will have a flat finish position (illustration #3) with your hands very low.

If you tilt your shoulders properly so that your right shoulder moves down and under (illustration #3), you will keep your clubhead on a proper path—inside the ball at all times. You will hit straighter shots, and you will complete your swing with a nice high finish (illustration #4).

Skinner New Phils Manager; Mauch Leaves, Allen Stays

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Gene Mauch lost his war with Rich Allen. The Philadelphia Phillies fired Mauch Saturday as manager and replaced him with Bob Skinner, skipper of the club's San Diego team.

Phillies' General Manager John Quinn in announcing Mauch's dismissal said "Allen was part of the reason, but Mauch had some personal problems too."

Mauch had fired Allen a number of times and on the Phillies recent West Coast trip, suspended the infielder-outfielder on a day-to-day basis until he would promise to abide by regulations.

When the Phillies arrived home last Monday, Allen went to see club owner Bob Carpenter. After an hour-long conference, Carpenter said he had resolved the Mauch-Allen situation. Allen returned to the lineup.

"Bob Carpenter and I have talked about a managerial change the last several days," Quinn said. "We planned to sit down with Gene. Unfortunately his wife is not well and was hospitalized. Since we were unable to meet with him last night, Bob and I called him this afternoon in Los Angeles, (Saturday) and informed him of our decision."

In Los Angeles, Mauch said, "I'm not of a mind to talk to anybody about it."

"I bear no grudge against the Phillies. They've been good to me."

Mauch said he had no immediate plans, and that his immediate concern was the health of his wife.

Allen's reaction to the Mauch firing was, "I guess everybody is going to think I got him fired. Wherever he goes I wish him luck. He's a good manager. We got along all right. We just differed a little in our ideas."

Mauch, who was in his ninth season as manager of the Phillies, it was learned, gave the Phillies management an ultimatum—either Allen or the manager. Allen wanted to be traded and the manager wanted to oblige. Carpenter decided a manager was more expendable.

Allison Wins Stock Race

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. (AP) — Donnie Allison, only one year out of the rookie class, won his first Grand National stock car race Sunday, outlasting a 44-car field in the Carolina 500-mile at Rockingham.

The 28-year-old Hueytown, Ala., father of two children, NASCAR's rookie of the year in 1967, finished more than two miles ahead of his older brother Bobby Allison to climax a day of attrition among top drivers unlike anything seen in southern stock car racing in years.

Donnie Allison, driving a factory-sponsored Ford, supervised by former driving great Banjo Matthews, added $15,675 to the $22,350 he already had won this season. The purse was $78,280.

It took the winner just over five hours to negotiate the 500 laps of the one-mile North Carolina Motor Speedway, where temperatures, according to a tire company official, were 145 degrees on the track surface.

The winning average speed was 99.397 miles an hour.

A crowd of 50,000, largest in the track's history, baked in 95-degree temperatures.

Only 14 cars finished the 500 miles of the 44 which started, and only two of the 14 factory-backed car finished.

James Hylton was third in a Dodge Charger, rookie Dick Brickhouse was fourth in a Plymouth and Roy Tyner fifth in a Ford.

Wahoo Crawford Dies at 88

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Sam (Wahoo) Crawford, one of baseball's all-time greats, is dead.

The end came Saturday evening at Hollywood Community Hospital after a length illness. He was 88.

Crawford, who compiled a lifetime batting average of .309 in his 19 years in the majors, was the only player to lead both leagues in home runs.

He hit 16 for Cincinnati of the National League in 1901 and seven with Detroit of the American League in 1908 before the so-called "lively ball" was in use.

Crawford's 312 lifetime triples is still the major-league record and though he was proud of the record he maintained that about half of those triples would have been homers against the ball in use today.

Crawford played in 2,114 games for the Tigers, ranking him behind only Ty Cobb and Charlie Gehringer on the all-time club list.

Crawford's 2,964 lifetime hits rank him ninth on the all-time list.

He received his nickname from his hometown of Wahoo, Neb., and was officially inducted into the Hall of Fame on July 22, 1957, with Joe McCarthy, long-time manager of the New York Yankees.

Lee Trevino Wins 68th U.S. Open; First to Play All 4 Rounds Under-Par

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Swashbuckling Lee Trevino, one-time $30-a-week assistant pro, climbed over cracking Bert Yancey, beat off a jarring rally by Jack Nicklaus and won the 68th U.S. Open Golf Championship Sunday with a record-matching score of 275.

The golf world may never get over it.

In the heat of the pressure on the backstretch of the Oak Hill course, the 28-year-old Mexican-American from El Paso, Tex., rapped home consecutive birdie putts of 35 and 20 feet on the 11th and 12th holes for a final round 69. That was the knockout.

He became the first man in history to play four rounds in the Open under par. He had 69-

68-69-69. Par for the 6,963-yard course is 70. It was his first tournament victory as a pro.

The big, blond Yancey, who set a record front-running pace through the first three rounds, saw his rusty blade putter turn from blast heat to ice, missed three putts under three feet and finished with 76 for 281.

That pushed him back into third place, behind the late surge of the defending champion, Nicklaus.

Nicklaus, who set the Open record of 275 a year ago at Baltusrol in Springfield, N.J., shook up the leaders early with birdies on the third and fourth holes, moving to within three shots of the lead, but it wasn't his day.

The 210-pound Golden Bear from Columbus, Ohio, fired a three-under par 67—without a bogey—for 279. He saw a half dozen birdie putts skip past the lip of the cup. He didn't give three others a chance.

First prize was worth $30,000 for Trevino, who was almost broke 12 months ago. Nicklaus collected $15,000 and Yancey $10,000.

All others in the star-studded field were playing for kicks and extra dollars. Bobby Nichols completed a great comeback with a 69 for fourth place at 282. Young Dick Spray, playing in semi-privacy, broke the course record with a 65, knocking in eight birdies, but settled for 284.

The stubby, wise cracking Latin gave the gallery of near 20,000 and the nationwide television audience a show with a scrambling, dramatic finish.

On the 463-yard 17th, after driving into the fairway, the Texan dubbed his second short of the green and then had to sink a 12-foot putt to save his par.

On the 449-yard 18th, with thousands lining the fairway and green, he booked his tee shot into the rough, duck-hooked his second into the thick grass 120 yards short of the green, then lashed the ball to within four feet of the cup. He sank it near his fourth straight subpar round.

"I'm happy to win the Open," Trevino said afterward. "It will make me rich."

Trevino was born in Dallas. He shined shoes and caddied as a kid. He picked eating money the best way he could.

He worked around golf clubs and then enrolled in the Marine Corp, being stationed in Okinawa.

"I didn't do anything but play golf with the colonels," he said. "That's where I really learned to play. I started out as a private but after beating the colonels a few times, I rose to sergeant."

The dark-haired, snub-nosed Trevino worked for a while as operator of a pitch and putt course.

Later, Trevino got a job as assistant to Don Whittington at the Horizon Hill course in El Paso. It was Whittington who staked the new Open champion to his first Open trip a year ago.

Players Switch Uniforms As Trade Deadline Passes

The major league trading deadline has come and gone and a number of players have done the same as the American and National Leagues reacted with a flurry of minor activity.

The biggest moves before midnight Saturday were a pair of straight player trades in which Baltimore sent pitcher relief pitcher Hal Gilson to Houston for outfielder Ron Davis.

The New York Yankees parted with two pitchers, selling reliever John Wyatt to the Detroit Tigers and Jim Bouton to Seattle, one of the two 1969 expansion teams. The Yankees also sent catcher Ellie Rodriguez back to Syracuse of the International League.

The moves by New York opened the rosters for the return from military duty of Al Downing, Frank Fernandez and Steve Whitaker.

The Orioles wanted Valentine as protection in case they lost Paul Blair to the Army. Blair had been ordered to report for active duty June 26, but the Army took another look at his injured ankle Friday and Baltimore still does not know if he is going.

Valentine, 33, hit .240 in 36 games for Washington with three homers and seven runs batted in.

Howard, 25, a right-hander, was obtained last winter from the Chicago White Sox in a six-player trade that sent Luis Aparicio and Russ Snyder to the Sox. He had a 3.77 earned run average in 31 innings and an 0-2 record for the Orioles.

Hall, 30, who hit a record 33 homers as a rookie in 1963, is hitting .210 with eight RBIs and one homer. Davalillo, 26, was batting .239 with 12 RBIs.

It was the second trade of outfielders by the Indians during the week as they sent Leon Wagner to the White Sox for Snyder.

Bouton, a 21-game winner in 1963 and a former World Series hero, has been bothered by arm trouble since winning 18 games in 1964. He is 1-1 in 12 games this season. The right-hander has been assigned to Seattle of the Pacific Coast League for the remainder of this season.

Wyatt, 33, was once one of the league's top relievers with Kansas City, but was traded to Boston in 1966 and sold to the Yankees this spring.

Southern Cal Wins NCAA Track Meet

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Gerry Lindgren figures he was the beneficiary of a miracle, but his Washington State teammates weren't so lucky.

Lindgren completed the third double of his college career when he won the 5,000-meter run at the National Collegiate Athletic Association track and field championships Saturday. But favored Southern California repeated as team champions by one point over the Cougars.

The Trojans scored 58 points to Washington State's 57 as the Cougars won four individual titles to Southern Cal's three.

The winning margin came on the basis of Tim Barrett's third-place finish in the triple jump. Barrett tied with Eric Klein of Washington at 51-0, but had a better second jump and was awarded third.

The difference between third and fourth was two points.

Lindgren, who won the 10,000 meters in 29:41.0, Thursday, said he was hurt and tired during the 5,000 and when three contestants got past him late in the race, he figured it was all over.

"I was dead back there," he said, "I could hardly move."

But move he did, shooting past Kerry Pearce of Texas-El Paso, Arne Kvalheim of Oregon and Dave Stagebert of Georgetown on the final backstretch to win in 13:57.2, a meet record.

"I don't know where I got it," Lindgren said. "It was a miracle."

The Volkswagen for people who refuse to drive Volkswagens.

If you refuse to drive a Volkswagen because it's ugly, we can't help you.

If you refuse to drive a Volkswagen because you have eight kids and it isn't big enough, you have our sympathy.

If you refuse to drive a Volkswagen because it isn't fancy enough, that's for you to decide.

But if you refuse to drive a Volkswagen because you're used to an automatic transmission, listen carefully.

Now you can drive a Volkswagen all over town without shifting.

We call this new option the automatic stick shift.

And in true Volkswagen fashion, a bug with an automatic stick shift will deliver up to 25 miles on a gallon of gas, use very little oil, and nary a drop of water or antifreeze.

But just because we've made it easy to drive, doesn't mean we're about to make it any prettier, or any bigger, or any fancier. So we imagine some people will still refuse to drive Volkswagens.

You can't win them all.

Bear Lake Area News

By PEGGY OSBORNE

The Bear Lake Firemen Auxiliary met Tuesday evening June 11 at the fire hall with President Mrs. Inez Carter presiding at the meeting. Discussion was held about the coming Warren County firemen's meeting to be held at Bear Lake this month, also the coming fish fry to be held Friday evening, June 21.

The auxiliary voted for the Labor Day Queen, she will be Miss Mairé Oviatt, and they also made plans for their float for the parade. Afterwards they had election of officers which were: president - Mrs. Hazel Oviatt, vice president - Mrs. Gene Jukes, secretary - Mrs. Mary Watson, treasurer - Mrs. Doris Smith, and flower fund - Mrs. Betty Crosby.

Games were played with Mrs. Mary Watson in charge. The following won: Dorothy Evans, Peggy Osborne, Gene Jukes, and Doris Smith. Refreshments were in charge of Mrs. Elsie Newhouse.

An open house was held June 2 at the Bear Lake Firehall, honoring the 50th Wedding Anniversary of Bert and Helen Reese, of North Clymer, N.Y. Mrs. Reese chose a navy blue two piece dress, and was favored with a corsage of yellow carnations. Mr. Reese was favored with a yellow carnation boutonniere.

There were about 100 friends and relatives present. The honored guests received many lovely gifts. Friends and relatives were from Clymer, Niobe, Panama, North Clymer, Lakewood, Sherman, Jamestown, and Sinclairville, New York, Pittsfield, Corry, Bear Lake, Wrightsville, Meadville, Cochranton, and Tidoute.

Serving at the punch bowl was Mrs. Leona Ford, sister-in-law of Mr. Reese, serving coffee was Mrs. Lois Crocka, sister of Mrs. Reese, and serving the four tiered cake was Mrs. Elton Reese, daughter-in-law of the couple. At the guest book was Miss Gloria Van Ord, granddaughter. The affair was given by Mr. and Mrs. Donald Reese and son; Mr. and Mrs. Elton Reese and family; and Mr. and Mrs. Paul VanOrd and family.
